SERIAL NO. 3613

Sub. No. 1 GUIDELINES FOR DEALING WITH SOME SPECIFIC PROVISIONS OF THE NOISE ABATEMENT ACT

Concerns continue to emanate from citizens and in particular promoters of events in relation to how some provisions contained in the Noise Abatement Act are dealt with by the police.

This Order highlights some of the more frequent complaints and provides guidelines for dealing with them.

1. The failure of Divisional Commanders to respond to applications for events within the legally required timeframe.

Section 5 of the Noise Abatement Act deals specifically with the entire process where a person intends to operate any specified equipment to provide music whether in a private or public space. In accordance with Section 5, Sub (5) the Superintendent of Police must respond in sufficient time to give the applicant a minimum of seven (7) days to appeal to the Commissioner of Police.

2. Applicants being told to appeal to the Honourable Minister of National Security.

There is no provision in the Noise Abatement Act for appeals to be made to the Honourable Minister of National Security. Section 7 of the Act states:

"The Minister may make regulations generally for giving effect to the provisions and purpose of this Act".

In each case that an application is refused, this wording must form the final paragraph:

"In accordance with Section 5, Sub 5 of the Noise Abatement Act, you may within seven (7) days after receiving this response, Appeal in writing to the Commissioner of Police who may revoke, vary or confirm this decision subject to such conditions as he deems necessary".

3. The Superintendent failing to give extension beyond the 12:00 midnight and 2:00 a.m. as stated in the Act.

The law is very strict and there is no provision for any extension beyond the stipulated hours.

4. Police causing damage to equipment whilst seizing or attempting to seize such equipment.

Section 6 of the Act provides for seizure of the equipment; however, due care must be taken not to damage any equipment whilst exercising the right to seize any such equipment.

5. Police arresting promoters and operators of equipment.

Unless it is absolutely safe to do so, it is recommended that the police proceed by summons to avoid any confrontation or resistance whilst effecting arrest for any offence under this Act.

It is of paramount importance that all Divisional Commanders and their staff have copies of the Noise Abatement Act and conduct training sessions to familiarize themselves with the provisions of this law.

APPENDIX 'A' THE PERSONAL USE OF SOCIAL MEDIA POLICY AND GUIDELINES TO FORCE ORDERS NO. 3613 DATED 2016-09-01

Personal Use of Social Media Policy & Guidelines

1 Purpose

The purpose of this policy is to inform, guide and educate sworn and unsworn members of the Jamaican Police Force in the accepted standard of use of social media whilst being a serving member of the police force. This policy is not intended to dissuade members from using social media, but to set minimum standard in its usage based on the nature of policing. The fact that members are scrutinized on, or off duty, makes it even more important for our behaviour and utterances to be in keeping with the code of conduct governing the organisation. Social media when used appropriately can be a great tool to advance our personal profile, make friends and keep in touch with the wider global community.

1.0 Background

The growing popularity of the social media network throughout the world has not escaped the members of the Jamaican Police Force, sworn and unsworn employees alike. Whilst these media have helped in the maintenance and rekindling of personal and professional relationships and have widened the knowledge base of members, they have also allowed for the creation of new opportunities, challenges and risks to the members of the organisation. While most members display professionalism in the use of these social media, there are others whose behaviour if left unchecked will bring the force into disrepute and endanger themselves and their colleagues. Some of the blatant infractions committed by some members of the organisation include; the open display of pictures with members handling weapons, open display of intimacy, expression of apathy towards administration, discussion of matters under investigation and other utterances that are liable.

Public relations are influenced by the attitude of the public towards the police and by the attitude of the police towards the public. The attitude of citizens is also influenced by other people and the media. It should be appreciated therefore that the attitude of the public is strongly influenced not only by their personal experience but also by their expectations and understanding of police policies. When adverse social commentaries and photographic displays are transmitted virally by members of the force it impacts the image and relations with the public. The damage is never usually witnessed by the sender but the image and integrity of the organisation comes up for scrutiny. Consequently the relations of the police with the public will be affected as the attitude of the average citizen is reflective of the attitudes of citizens at all levels of society

1.1 Scope

This document applies to the personal use of social media sites by members of the Jamaica Constabulary Force, Island Special Constabulary Force, Rural Police Force, unsworn members (including contract and temporary), contractors, sub-contractors and consultants who are privy to information because of their unique position with the police force.

2 Legislative Framework

This document should be read in conjunction with the Jamaican Constitution, the Jamaica Constabulary Force Ethics and Integrity Policy and The JCF Media Policy.

a) Constitutional Provisions: the Jamaican Constitution

Enshrined in the Constitution of Jamaica is the protection of certain fundamental rights of the citizens to include but not limited to the right to freedom of expression, freedom to hold opinion and to receive and impart ideas and information.

Sec 22(1) except with his own consent, no person shall be hindered in the enjoyment of his freedom of expression, and for the purposes of this section the said freedom includes the freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart ideas and information without interference, and freedom from interference with his correspondence and other means of communication.

Albeit this right to freedom of expression is a constitutional right to which all Jamaicans are entitled, it must be noted that this right is not an absolute right and requires of every citizen responsible conduct and commentary.

b) which is reasonably required:

i. in the interests of defence, public safety, public order, public morality or public health; or

ii. for the purpose of protecting the reputations, rights and freedoms of other persons, or the private lives of persons concerned in legal proceedings, preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, maintaining the authority and independence of the courts, or regulating telephony, telegraphy, posts, wireless broadcasting, television or other means of communication, public exhibitions or public entertainments; or Subsection 2(a) (b), imposes restrictions upon public officers, police officers or upon members of a defence force."

On interpretation appears to give the legislature and other organs of the State the authority to restrict freedom of expression in relation to "public officers, police officers or upon members of a defence force."

2.1 Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms Act (Constitutional Amendment Act 2011)

With the passing of the Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms Act in April 2011 however, which repeals and replaces Chapter 3 of the Constitution under which Section 22 falls there appears to be a change in the interpretation as it relates to the rights to freedom of expression. There are restriction on public officers to include, police officers and members of the defence force as it relates to their freedom of Expression

2.2 Libel and Slander Act

Members of the organisation are being reminded that when making comments via social media, to do so in keeping with Sections 5 and 6 of the Libel and Slander Act:

Sec (5). " If any person shall maliciously publish any defamatory libel, knowing the same to be false, every such person, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding two years, and to pay such fine as the court shall impose

Sec (6). If any person shall maliciously publish any defamatory libel, every such person, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to fine or imprisonment or both, as the court may impose, such imprisonment not to exceed the term of one year."

3 PERSONAL USE AND POLICE EMPLOYMENT

3.1 PUBLIC COMMENT AND POLICE EMPLOYMENT

This policy sets standards that must be followed when Police Service employee use social media in a private capacity, especially if they identify themselves as Police service employees either directly or as part of a user profile, or if they can be identified as working for the Police Service via the content of their postings.

These guidelines identify the key dangers involved in the personal use of social media by police employees, and provide recommendations to help employees protect their privacy and career, as well as the safety of themselves, their family and colleagues.

3.2 Social Media is Public Comment

There is no such thing as a "private" social media site, regardless of the privacy settings. Posting information on-line is no different from publishing in a newspaper. If an employee makes any comment about the Police Service on a social media site they are making a public comment.

Employees must not, in their capacity as Police Service employees, make any police comment in social media about any incident, police policy or procedure without prior authorization from the Commissioner of Police in accordance with the Media Policy and the Corporate Social Media Policy.

A corporate spokesperson is responsible for representing the JCF and its auxiliaries externally on matters concerning particular communities, crimes or policing portfolios and activities. The Spokesperson ensures there are consistent, concise, accurate and clear information to the public on key corporate issues.

3.3 Public Comment as a Private Citizen

A person identifiable as a police officer who posts offensive, racist or obscene material while off duty on social media sites, could be in breach of the Jamaica Constabulary Force Ethics and Integrity Policy in the same way as if he/she shouted offensive, racist or obscene material in public whilst in uniform.

3.4 On-line Activity

The Jamaica Constabulary Force Ethics and Integrity Policy states that all members of the JCF and its auxiliaries must behave honestly and in a way that upholds the values and the good reputation of the Police Service whether on or off duty.

In posting to social media sites in a private capacity:

- (1) Links or references to documents on JCF website, intranet or social media sites are permitted;
- (2) Give an opinion but be clear that it is a personal opinion; where personal views are expressed then it is encouraged that the pre-cursor "In my Opinion" be attached.
- (3) Do not comment on, suggest or hint at matters that are, or are likely to be investigated. Such action may jeopardise the investigative and or judicial process;
- (4) Do not post any material that may bring the JCF and its auxiliaries into disrepute;
- (5) Do not comment on or post documents that are confidential and proprietary to administration.
- (6) Under no circumstances should offensive comments be made about managers, peers or colleagues.
- (7) Make sure on-line activities do not interfere with job performance. For example, public comment on a particular Police Force or Government policy or program is inappropriate if the employee is directly involved in advising on, directing the implementation of, or administering that policy program. The comment(s) could be seen as compromising the employee's ability to do the job in an unbiased manner;
- (8) Think of what you write in the same way as things you might say to a journalist, or conversations you might have with people you don't know. If you would not say it in those situations, do not say it online. Talking about some things could get you and the organisation in legal trouble, even if it is just your own personal view
- (9) Whether on or off duty a police employee's conduct will reflect on the organisation. All employees must protect the reputation of the Police Service by behaving in a lawful and appropriate manner consistent with the Force's Ethics and Integrity Policy.
- (10) Do not use police email addresses in personal social media sites; Do not imply endorsement of personal views, or authorisation to speak on behalf of the police force;
- (11) Obey the law- Do not post any material that is defamatory, libellous, discriminatory, harassing, obscene or threatening, discloses other persons' personal information or infringes intellectual property, copyright or a trademark;
- (12) Do not use the name of the Police Force to endorse products, causes or opinions

APPENDIX 'A' (CONT'D) TO FORCE ORDERS NO. 3613 DATED 2016-09-01

3 | Page

- (13) Do not post Police Service insignias without official consent
- (14) Your conduct should be appropriate at all times for your role. Your manager, reporters and peers may read what you write.

3.5 CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

The unauthorised disclosure of confidential information is a significant risk to the Police Service and has serious ramifications for any employee who commits such disclosure. For example, the disclosure of confidential police information by uploading operational material (crime scene photos, in-car video footage, CCTV footage or footage of police training exercises, accused whilst in police custody, etc) onto social media sites is a serious breach of legislation and policy and may lead to criminal charges being laid against offending employees.

The Jamaica Constabulary Force Ethics and Integrity Policy states that an employee must only access, use or disclose confidential information if required by their duties and allowed by Police Service policy.

An officer is expected to treat all information which comes to their attention in an official capacity as strictly confidential, and on no account without proper authorization divulge it to anyone. This is a serious matter which may result in managerial action and could jeopardise employment with the Police Service.

The unauthorised on-line publication of confidential information such as training videos discloses police methodology to the public. Police employees, who provide police methodology to criminals and the media via this medium, directly compromise the safety of operational police officers.

Employees, who are uncertain whether or not material they have posted on a social media site is a breach of law or policy, are to remove the material immediately and then seek advice from senior officer such as a duty officer or Commander.

4 CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

4.1 Conflict of Interest Policy

The Conflicts of Interest Policy and Guidelines contained within the Jamaica Constabulary Force Ethics and Integrity Policy states that it is the responsibilities of all employees to take reasonable steps to:

- (1) Identify and avoid actual, potential or perceived conflicts of interests
- (2) Report those conflicts of interest which cannot be avoided, and
- (3) Cooperate in the management of such perceived conflicts of interest

Where a conflict of interest arises due to an employee's social media site or postings, the employee must notify their Commander or Supervisor in writing. The commander/supervisor and the employee must manage the conflict of interest to protect the integrity of the employee the JCF and its auxiliaries.

4.2 Improper Associations

The Jamaica Constabulary Force Ethics and Integrity Policy treating with Police Service Conflicts of Interest (Improper Associations) the states that employees of the JCF and its auxiliaries must take all reasonable steps to identify and avoid associations with people, groups or organizations that are involved in (or perceived to be involved in) any activity that is incompatible with their roles to uphold the law.

An employee's association with some on-line groups or individuals could be seen as endorsement of their views. This includes 'liking' groups on Facebook, 'following groups or people on Twitter, or accepting people as 'friends'.

Association with individuals, activities or social media groups that may damage the reputation of the Police service must be avoided.

4.3 The Media

If an employee is contacted by the media about posts on their social media sites that relate to the JCF, they must talk to their manager and the Police Media Unit/CCN before responding.

If an employee is offered payment to produce a blog or micro blog etc. for a third party, this could constitute a conflict of interest and /or secondary employment and must be discussed with their manager.

5 MONITORING

5.1 Reporting Misconduct

If a Police Service employee becomes aware of a social media site or posting that is illegal or support criminal conducts/activities he or she is duty bound to report the matter to the relevant departments for investigation.

If staff is aware of on-line criticism or complaints about police activities, refer them to the relevant authorities for assessment.

5.2 Audits of Social Media Sites

The JCF will from time to time conduct audits of social media sites to identify breaches of legislation and Policies. In response to specific concerns, complaints or information about an employee, the JCF may conduct on-line searches to obtain additional information about the employee in order to assess or investigate the complaint or concern.

PART 2: GUIDELINES

6 PROTECTING YOUR PRIVACY AND SAFETY

6.1 NOTHING IS PRIVATE ON THE WEB

Employees are advised against posting anything to social media sites that would cause discomfort to themselves and the organisation if:

- (1) Quoted in the media
- (2) Raised in court while they are giving evidence
- (3) Tested against the SELF test (Scrutiny, Ethical, Lawful, Fair)

Everything posted or received on a social media site is public property. Once something is published on-line, control of it is lost forever. Search engines can find posts years after the publication date. Comments, even when sent to friends only can be forwarded, quoted or misquoted. Archival systems save or cache information even if deleted can reproduce information. Once it is posted on-line, it cannot be withdrawn.

The terms of service for social media sites apply to whatever is posted on the site. The terms may allow for posted material to be used in ways that the author did not intend, such as being exchanged with third parties.

6.2 Safety- Personal Information

The amount of personal information a police employee places on social media sites is a matter of personal choice. However, employees need to be aware of the potential risks involved for themselves and others when making these decisions.

Personal social media sites are of potential safety and privacy risks to police employees and others if not carefully managed. Disclosing too much private information on social media makes a person easy to locate both on-line and off-line. This vulnerability creates a risk of identity theft, fraud, theft, physical attack, stalking, harassment and intimidation.

For example, if an employee's file contains information such as their date of birth and spouse or parents' names, this can give criminals enough information to answer the security questions a bank will ask before giving them access to the officer's financial information or bank accounts.

More importantly, the nature of police work exposes police employees to the risk of offenders seeking revenge. Social media sites with easily accessible personal information provide a simple and effective means to locate an officer and their family or friends.

It is strongly recommended that to protect themselves, family and friends, police staff (sworn and unsworn) should never identify themselves either directly or indirectly as Police Force employees on social sites. It is also recommended that employees strictly limit the amount of personal information they post on social sites. Employees should think seriously about the risks involved to themselves, family and friends if they choose to include personal information about themselves or others in posts or social media sites, such as names, dates of birth, home or work addresses, private or work email addresses or telephone numbers, relationship status or any other personal information like photographs that may be useful for identity thieves or criminals seeking revenge. It is a good idea to create a separate email address that is used only with personal social media sites.

Where members of the JCF and its auxiliaries choose to identify themselves as police employees, it is recommended that they do not post identifying information about their family such as where they live, where they or their partner works or what school their children attend. For example, do not post photographs of home showing the street number, or photographs of private vehicle (s) show the licence plates.

6.3 Privacy Settings

It is recommended that the highest available level of privacy settings be selected to control access to personal information as appropriate. In order to ensure maximum security, it is recommended that sharing rights be set to 'friends only'. Do not become complacent, as privacy settings are no protection against determined hackers.

Check privacy settings when a social media site is redesigned. During redesign privacy setting may have defaulted to a lower level of security, providing public access to profiles.

6.4 Stalk Book: Knowing where you are

It is recommended that employees do not post information about the activities they will be participating in, their location or intended location as this makes them easy target. To guard against burglaries or malicious damage, do not post information that discloses when you are away from home.

Some social media sites with programs such as Foursquare, Gowalla or Facebook Places offer the ability to reveal to the public a person's exact location in real time, via mobile phones. While this will enable people to locate friends, it can enable criminals to accumulate a very detailed map of a person's habits, as well as identify their exact location at any given time. Criminals will also know when a person is not at home.

If adopting this type of social media service, it is recommended that employees limit to 'friends only' those who can access their location, and make sure they only have on-line friends they can trust.

6.5 Protect your reputation

It is recommended that employees conduct personal on-line searches. Contact should be initiated with websites that have posted personal or inaccurate information without your permission. If the information displayed contravenes the websites policies they may remove it. On request, social media sites like Facebook and LinkedIn may remove the profiles of persons who impersonate others.

7 ON-LINE FRIENDS

7.1 Friends

An employee's safety and on-line security is only as good as their friends' common sense and security settings. Researchers have found that one tactic used by people seeking to obtain confidential information about someone is to simply send a friend request to the target. If accepted, they have access to considerable personal information about their target, including pictures, contact information, lifestyles, family and associates.

Once accepted a friend has the ability to forward to others the private information they have been given access to, or to quote you when they make comments publicly on-line. Given the risk, consider carefully before accepting friend request especially from person in media related field of work. It has been the experience of several law enforcement officers, where members of the media have used their on-line affiliation as a source of information for news stories.

To avoid revealing personal information to strangers, or having inappropriate or illegal postings on a personal site, it is recommended that employees check all potential friends carefully before approving them, especially strangers. Find out if any current friends know the person, and run an on-line search and check their profiles. Only accept people as friends after confirming their identity and that the friendship would not be an improper association. If an employee has any doubts about whether to approve someone as a friend- do not approve them.

Friend profiles should be reviewed occasionally to see if their recent activity is unacceptable or creates a new conflict of interest or improper association.

6 | Page

7.2 Friends of Friends

Accepting a friend will also link an employee to that new friend's associates (Friends of Friends). This link, although direct, can create risks. It is recommended that employees set their privacy settings so that their site cannot be seen by Friends of Friends. (Be aware that the standard setting usually allows access to Friends of Friends).

Becoming linked to a friend's associates can also create a conflict of interest with a police employee's public role, or an improper association.

8 PROTECTING YOUR CAREER & COLLEAGUES

8.1 SOCIAL MEDIA USE AND YOUR CAREER

8.1.1 Inappropriate Photographs or Comments

Inappropriate photographs or comments on social media sites are a risk to both the police employee and the Force.

Employees are advised to ensure that what they post today will not come back to affect their career, sometimes years later. Choose profile photographs and avatars with care. Employees should think very carefully about the comments they post on-line; especially if intoxicated. It is recommended that employees only do or say on-line what they would do or say off-line in public. For example, staff should only load comments or photographs onto social media sites that they would be comfortable with seeing on the front of the newspaper.

Reporters and lawyers regularly check the social websites of people who come to their attention. Major newspapers employ staff to actively investigate social media sites to identify content or angles for news stories.

Newspapers generally keep copies of all photographs they publish. The police officers identified by their embarrassing photographs may find the pictures republished by the newspaper years later if they again make the news. This risk may limit their ability to be considered acceptable for any high profile or senior police positions.

A New York defence lawyer got his client's charge downgraded from carrying a loaded weapon to resist arrest by arguing that the arresting officer planted the gun on the defendant as an excuse for breaking his ribs during the arrest. The lawyer succeeded in damaging the officer's credibility by tabling evidence from the officer's media sites. On these sites the officer had stated he was devious, watching a film about a corrupt police officer to brush up on procedure, and had posted advice on how to assault people during an arrest.

Employers also conduct internet searches on job candidates before making an offer of employment. A person whose social media profile shows them to be socially irresponsible is less likely to be employed.

9 SOCIAL USE AND COVERT CAREERS

9.1 Undercover and Surveillance Operatives

The Police Service goes to considerable lengths to protect the identity of undercover and surveillance operatives in covert operations; including the provision of assumed identities and the suppression of public records. Police employees must take care to ensure that undercover and surveillance operatives cannot be identified on-line.

Undercover and surveillance operatives are strongly advised not to have a personal social media site which identifies them by name, photograph, or employment with the Police Service.

Undercover operatives who use or are identifiable on social media sites may compromise their safety and ongoing operational effectiveness in the Undercover Program. Should this occur an assessment will be made by the Director NIB, as to their continued deployment in this role. The assessment is to ensure the safety and welfare of undercover officers, as well as the integrity of Police operations and methodologies.

Police employees must also consider the consequences when they identify colleagues as police officers on social media sites. There is a real potential to inadvertently endanger the lives of covert colleagues by publishing on social media sites picture or information identifying them or their employment by the Police Service.

APPENDIX 'A' (CONT'D) TO FORCE ORDERS NO. 3613 DATED 2016-09-01

Police employees not currently in undercover or surveillance roles should consider the potential affect of having a media site of their future ability to perform covert duties. An undercover or surveillance career may be impossible after years of publishing their identity and picture on social media site.

9.2 Counter Intelligence and Extortion

Law enforcement agencies use social media sites to gather intelligence- so do criminals. Police employees run the risk of criminals using social media sites to befriend them on-line to obtain sensitive information. If a criminal can lure the employee into compromising situations either on-line or off-line, then the employee may be vulnerable to extortion to provide sensitive information.

10 PROTECTING YOUR COLLEAGUES

10.1 Postings of other people

Employees should think carefully before posting pictures or personal information about other police employees. For example, posting pictures of colleagues onto social media sites in what is seen as funny situations may seriously damage their reputations and career, or place their life at risk, sometime years after the posting was made and then deleted. Similarly, an employee's reputation and career may be damaged due to postings about them made by their friend or colleagues.

Under no circumstances should offensive comments be made about Police Service colleagues on social media sites.

Employees should be considerate to their colleagues and not post details of private conversations, photographs of colleagues or tag photographs with a colleague's name without permission. Employees should also not post information about a colleague, or remove information posted about them, if that colleague did give consent.

10.2 Legal Liability

It is recommended that employees seek permission from the person before making postings about others, especially if the posting is compromising or contains information that identifies them by name, photograph, and employment with the Police Service or where they live. A publication which damages the reputation of a person may be defamation. Placing inappropriate pictures of or comments about others onto social media sites, or allowing others to post such pictures or comments on a personal site, could result in expensive litigation for defamation.
