Sub. No. 1 THE COMMISSIONER'S CORNER

Family, Focus and Transparency in Communication

Greetings again my distinguished Colleagues.

As we approach the weekend, I trust that the week has been good, and that things are great at home. I recall once as Area Commander for Area 3, there was an Inspector attached to the Manchester Division, who had a pretty bad stroke. During his recovery, the offer was made for him to be taken care of at our Convalescence Home in St. Elizabeth. However, he opted to be looked after at home. I remember visiting him at home to check on his wellbeing, and was so moved by the open show of love and affection being showered upon him by his two adult sons, each over 6 feet tall, and his charming wife. I never forget that moment, and while I too am a person who understands the value of family, it reinforced my already strong belief that family comes first. So Colleagues, for those of you who have challenges at home, do not walk your journey alone. While we are not perfect as an organisation, we do have very strong support systems in which you can tap for help. A happy police is an effective police.

As we move forward, let us keep in mind that our effectiveness as police officers depends not only on operational success, but also on maintaining balance in our personal lives. Family and wellbeing must never be treated as secondary matters, because when those areas are neglected, it eventually weakens us on the job. Use the systems in place, reach out when support is needed, and ensure that you are fit - mentally, emotionally, and physically - for the responsibilities we carry every day.

Colleagues, I once again thank you for your resilience in standing up to the murdering thugs within our society. Your effort is a clear demonstration of what returns on the investments of resources, trust and public support look like. We are approaching the final quarter of 2025, and within reach of our sub 1000 goal. However, we cannot rest, nor can we yet celebrate. So, while I implore you to be encouraged by the results that you have helped to create, note also, that we now have to sprint these final 3 and a half months. As our erudite Strategic Operations Commander often says, let's march on.

In the weeks ahead, we must remain vigilant, consistent, and deliberate in our actions. The pressures will mount as the year draws to a close, but we cannot afford complacency. Every operation and every decision matters in this final stretch. Stay focused, follow procedures, and maintain the discipline that has brought us this far. If we each continue to do our part with diligence, the collective results will speak for themselves.

One of the first promises I made to you as your Commissioner, was to ensure effective internal communication. I do not believe that you are to be spectators in your own game. Too often we speak about what the JCF is doing, or what the JCF stands for, not remembering that you are the JCF. It means that everything that affects the JCF, affects you. And so, it is in your interest to have a clear understanding of things that impact your organisation. But even while this is so, I am sure as police men and women, you are acutely aware that we are sometimes constrained by procedures and proceedings in what we can share. It is always a delicate balance to manage the need to give clarity to a situation, and the need not to compromise an internal process. This is made even more complicated when these matters become the subject of social media chatter and noise, laced with inaccuracies and opinions. It is unfortunate that this is the space within which we sometimes leave you to shape your perception on a matter that bears importance to you. For that, I must apologize. However, I crave your patience, continued support and confidence in a High Command whose decisions are always in the best interest of the JCF, which is you.

Colleagues, my intention has always been to reduce the gaps that leave room for speculation and misinformation. I want you to feel confident that you are not being left in the dark on issues that matter to you. While I cannot promise that we will always be able to say everything in real time, I can assure you that transparency and respect for your right to know will continue to guide how we communicate as an organisation.

Whether you will be at work or at home, may you find the time to recharge, reflect, and stand ready with renewed strength and focus to face the new week. Until next week, walk good.

1.0 Introduction

Operational support is a critical component of an organization's ability to maintain efficiency, respond to emerging challenges, and ensure continuity of service. The Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) recognises the essential role of operational support in enhancing readiness, minimizing disruptions, and maintaining a high standard of service across all formations. This capability enables the rapid movement of equipment and personnel wherever necessary.

This policy and Standard Operating Procedures (SOP) establishes a systematic approach to preserving public safety. It incorporates interdepartmental coordination protocols for intelligence-driven anti-gang initiatives and sets clear performance benchmarks for the rapid deployment of resources in hotspot zones. Additionally, it aligns the operational support function with evidence-based strategies aimed at reducing the socioeconomic impact of organized crime.

2.0 Purpose

This policy and SOP provides a structured framework for the effective planning, coordination, and delivery of support services essential to operational readiness. It also establishes guidelines for the utilization of specialized expertise, intelligence gathering, and the use of technology to combat crime.

3.0 Scope

This policy and SOP applies to all sworn members of the JCF. It covers the responsibilities and functions to be carried out by Divisional Operations Support Teams (DOSTs).

4.0 Policy Statement

The JCF will apply policy oversight to:

- 4.1 maintain a robust and standardized operational support framework that ensures the effective deployment of resources, personnel, and equipment;
- 4.2 ensure that all members adhere to the guidelines outlined in this policy and SOP to promote coordination and enhance operational readiness; and
- 4.3 increase the integration of technical support to facilitate timely responses to both planned and emergency operations.

1.0 Introduction

High population density, traffic congestion, narrow streets, and varied terrain across Jamaica present challenges for law enforcement responding to emergency situations using motor cars or pick-ups. Motorcycles have proven more suitable to address these challenges, as they afford the required agility and speed necessary to navigate congested streets.

This policy provides guidance and outlines directives to govern the Jamaica Constabulary Force's Quick Response Unit (QRU). The QRU responds to unusual or critical, rapidly evolving incidents and supports other divisions and units within the Jamaica Constabulary Force in crime prevention activities.

The QRU is required to focus on crime prevention and arrest offenders. Members of the QRU are expected to be adept at effecting arrests, seizing prohibited weapons, and recovering stolen vehicles and other properties. The main arm of the QRU is the Metro Quick Response Unit, which forms part of the Public Safety Division (PSD) of the Public Safety and Traffic Enforcement Branch (PSTEB).

2.0 Purpose

This Policy and Standard Operating Procedures for the Management of Quick Response Teams outlines the JCF's established guidelines for the QRUs. It ensures that resources are effectively and efficiently optimized and aligned with established protocols and standards, maintaining consistency and reliability in operations.

3.0 Scope

This Policy and Standard Operating Procedures applies to all sworn members of the Jamaica Constabulary Force and the Rural Police Force. It establishes the communication and coordination frameworks within the QRU to facilitate effective operations.

4.0 Policy Statement

The Jamaica Constabulary Force is committed to ensuring the safety, security, and well-being of all citizens through the rapid and effective deployment of QRUs. This policy emphasizes professionalism, accountability, and adherence to established protocols in maintaining public trust.

Are affected males patients aware that of Importance of Preventive Physiotherapy in managing their diagnosis of with Prostate Cancer?

Prostate cancer (PCa) is a cancer disease affecting the prostate gland. It is usually common among males in the age group 50 years and older. Through early diagnosis and intervention, this disease is usually curable and be treated successfully. Those living with PCa can have an improved life expectancy with implementation of effective screening programs and therapies. Apart of these therapies for maintenance of quality of life and longer surviving and functional person, is through Physical Therapy.

With the improvement in medication/drug therapy and surgical interventions in the modern era there is an observed elongated life expectancy in the affected male population. This elongation of life may lead to a decrease in quality of life through decline in muscle strength, physical activity level; an increase in fatigue and sleep problems (Özdemir et al 2016). To preclude the occurrence of these symptoms, the preventive physiotherapy approaches may be used in PCa patients.

Preventive physiotherapy speaks to a proactive approach focused on injury prevention and health maintenance before problems or existing issues worsen. The physiotherapist during their assessment of any at risk, ill and unwell clients seek to identifies individual risk factors, provides education on body mechanics, and develops personalized exercise programs to improve strength, flexibility, and posture.

Preventive physiotherapy in urology focuses on pelvic floor muscle training (PFMT), Exercises for pelvic gridle strengthening (eg. Kegel exercises) to improve bladder control, reduce the risk of urinary incontinence, manage pain, and support overall function.

These interventions are especially important before and beneficial after procedures like prostatectomy or just for managing chronic bladder issues. The full treatment package for PCa patients is robust and the trained therapist is usually able to teach exercises to strengthen, coordinate, and relax pelvic floor muscles, sometimes combined with biofeedback, electrical stimulation, and lifestyle advice to promote bladder health. One reason for low participation rate in preventive Physiotherapy care may be inadequate information of PCa patients the specialty. Hence this article should serve to sensitize and inform the population about the benefits of Physiotherapy in management of the potential complications associated with PCa patients as well as improving overall quality of life.
