SERIAL NO. 4024

Sub. No. 1 THE COMMISSIONER'S CORNER

Greetings Distinguished Colleagues,

I trust that you have been having a good week and are in good health. Let us continue to lend support and offer prayers for our brothers and sisters who may not be doing so well in health and otherwise. Just remember we are like a well-oiled machine with all important working parts, the failure of any of which will render the machine inoperable. So let's endeavour to continue to be our brothers' and sisters' keepers, for the good of the force and country.

Today I want to have a brief discussion around the area of sustainable development and our role in it. Often when the topic of sustainable development is discussed, it is in the context of the natural environment and resources, such as issues surrounding global warming, the impact of deforestation on the environment, air pollution and the impact of industrialization and urbanization on natural resources. However, I want us to take a look at sustainable development through the perspective of public safety and national security.

In this context, sustainable development refers to the effect of crime and violence on the sustainability of a country's development. It includes the balancing of the country's long-term protection of the environment with its economic growth and its social development. Sustainable development is therefore a multifaceted goal that requires a holistic approach involving various sectors of society. In Jamaica, the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) plays a pivotal role in this process. Beyond our primary function of law enforcement, we must recognize our responsibility to contribute to the sustainable development of the nation by ensuring public safety. Social instability is a clear threat to the economic growth of a country and crime and violence creates an unstable social environment.

Public safety is a cornerstone of sustainable development. Without a secure environment, other developmental efforts are severely hampered. Our mandate to maintain law and order is crucial in creating a stable and secure society where citizens can live, work, and pursue their aspirations without fear. Colleagues, we have to continue the unrelenting effort of effectively combating crime and maintaining public order, if we are to ensure a foundation upon which social and economic development can thrive. This is an awesome responsibility that I know we all take very seriously and one for which the nation depends upon us.

We have to continue to invest in the training and development of our members to be better at deterring criminal activities and reducing the incidence of violent crimes that disrupt businesses and communities. Moreover, our community engagements help to build trust and cooperation between law enforcement and the public, fostering a sense of collective responsibility for maintaining peace and security. This social stability is essential for sustainable development, as it enables communities to focus on long-term growth and improvement, rather than being preoccupied with immediate survival.

One very important industry to the nation's growth and development is tourism. It is one of Jamaica's primary economic drivers and it depends heavily on the perception of safety. Our role is to ensure low crime rates and swiftly address incidents that could harm the industry. In doing so, we will help to attract and retain visitors, thereby bolstering the economy.

Colleagues, I decided on this topic because I want us to reflect on what we do and its importance in the economic and development ecosystem of our nation. What we do is not just about enforcing law as a mean without an end. Let us be reminded that the beat patrol team deployed on St. James Street in Montego Bay is helping to ensure the economic sustainability of businesses in the space, by providing a safe space in which to do business with their customers. The work of the St. Andrew South Division's Operational Support Team (OST) does not only result in the arrest and charge of violent individuals, but also ensures that children in the communities have a free and safe passage to and from school, thereby ensuring the educational development of the nation.

THE COMMISSIONER'S CORNER (CONT'D)

A Fraud Squad's case against a perpetrator who has committed banking fraud is more than just bringing him to justice. It is also about protecting the financial sector. The work of the Intellectual Property Unit (IPU) within CTOC protects the creative arts and manufacturing industries. It also protects the health of the nation by focusing on counterfeit pharmaceutical and other consumable products.

So you see my dear Colleagues, we are the guardians of the viability and prosperity of our beautiful nation. That is why we do what we do with the passion, zeal and commitment and without any desire of recognition and praise and without fanfare. Let us always keep in mind the critical link between what we do and its contribution to the sustainable development of Jamaica.

Again, I wish for you and your families a peaceful and blessed weekend. Until next week, walk good.
