The Police High Command is aware of the practice of some police personnel still turning away citizens who attend police stations to make reports of incidents on the basis that the incidents occurred outside of the station's boundaries.

In the case of a motor vehicle accident, the Road Traffic Act provides that the parties involved may report the accident to any policeman or policewoman, at a station of his/her choice.

In the case of a citizen making a crime report, a report of any offence or a request for any kind of police service at a police station, NO CITIZEN should be re-directed to another police station or office.

The citizens' report must be taken and recorded. Where it is necessary to record a statement at the time the report is made, this statement must be recorded at the station where the report is first made.

Citizens making reports at any police station must receive a receipt from the officer taking the report. This is a requirement and must be done by all officers.

Citizens who have been turned away at any police station may ask to speak to the sub-officer in charge of the station. If there is no change in the situation or satisfaction, citizens can then speak or write to the officer in charge of the police division concerned.
