This domestic violence training manual for the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) has been made possible under Pillar 4 of the EU-Funded Spotlight Initiative partnership with the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) to provide essential quality and accessible services to victims/survivors of gender-based violence.

Special thanks to the Community Safety and Security Branch (CSSB) of the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF), National Police College of Jamaica (NPCJ) and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) for their individual and collective contributions to the creation of the manual which was also guided by facilitation sessions of the 5-week domestic violence training of trainers course.

Special writing contributions from Elga Salvador (UNFPA), DSP Jacqueline Dillon (CSSB) and Kyisha Patterson (Consultant).

Special administrative contributions from Woman District Constable Annique Hutchinson (CSSB), Inspector Raquel Longmore (CSSB) and Detective Corporal Damion Hammond (DVI Care Unit).

INTRODUCTION

Background

Domestic Violence (DV) remains a pervasive issue that affects individuals, families, and communities globally. To address these shortcomings and to uphold the rights and safety of domestic violence victims/survivors, there was an urgent need to establish a comprehensive training programme that equips the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) personnel with the knowledge, skills, and empathy necessary to address domestic violence cases effectively. With the assistance of the EU-funded Spotlight Initiative (SI) through the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), domestic violence training has been introduced to the JCF. In order to increase the scope of the training, a Training of Trainers course was developed to allow for rapid knowledge transfer throughout the police force facilitated through the National Police College Jamaica (NPCJ) with Community Safety and Security Branch (CSSB).

International Quality Standards

The JCF domestic violence training forms part of the United Nations Joint Global Programme on Essential Services for Women and Girls Subject to Violence which aims “to provide a women and girls who have experienced gender-based violence with greater access to a set of essential quality and coordinated multi-sectoral services.”¹ These services include the health, social services, police and justice sectors and form part of a multisectoral response. For domestic violence training, the Essential Services Package (ESP) framework (See Diagram 1) is being utilised in tandem with the Jamaican policy and legislative framework, and the Standards of Procedure of the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF). The Essential Services Package (ESP) in relation to the police and justice sectors, provides a framework for guidelines incorporating four interlinked components:

¹ UN Women, UNFPA, WHO, UNDP and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) (2015). Essential Services Package for Women and Girls Subject to Violence Core Elements and Quality Guidelines. “Module 3 Justice and Policing: Essential Services Package for women and girls subject to violence, Core Elements and Quality Standards, Chapter 1 p. 6. - “Principles which underpin the delivery of all essential services.
- Common characteristics which describe a range of activities and approaches that are common across all areas, and which support the effective functioning and delivery of services.
- Essential services which set out the absolute minimum required services to secure the human rights, safety and well-being of any woman, girls or child who experience intimate partner violence and or non-partner sexual violence
- Foundational elements which must be in place to enable the delivery of quality services across all essential services and actions.”²

The police and justice system work closely along the phases of the justice continuum ensuring that the victims/survivors are supported from the moment they have reported their domestic violence incident at initial contact up until the post-trial process if it has reached to this level. ³ (See Diagram 2). It is important that the work of the JCF alongside the UNFPA, is grounded on the notion of improved quality and accessibility of the essential services being offered, upholding to international quality standards included in the Essential Services Package for women and girls

Jamaican Legislative Framework

The Jamaica Constabulary Force training on domestic violence is grounded and informed by the legal framework supporting gender-based violence and domestic violence. The main legislation is the Domestic Violence Act (1996) which informs on the treatment of perpetrators and the protection of victim/survivors. This law addresses domestic violence, defining it broadly to include physical, sexual, emotional, or psychological abuse between intimate partners or family members. It provides for protection orders, emergency protection orders, and occupation orders to safeguard victims.

Apart from the Domestic Violence Act (1996), Jamaica has several laws aimed at addressing gender-based violence (GBV) and domestic violence (DV). Here are some key elements of the legislative framework:

- Sexual Harassment (Protection and Prevention) Act (2021): This Act seeks to provide
- Offences Against the Person Act (1864 Amended 2014): This Act criminalizes various forms of violence, including assault, rape, and other forms of sexual violence. Amendments have been made over time to address evolving concerns.
- Sexual Offences Act (2009): This Act specifically addresses sexual offenses, providing legal definitions and penalties for acts like rape, sexual assault, and sexual harassment.
- The Child Care and Protection Act (2004): While not exclusively focused on domestic violence, this Act emphasises the rights of the child while protecting children from abuse and neglect which often includes instances of domestic violence within families.

The importance of addressing gender-based violence & domestic violence in Jamaica

Domestic violence, specifically intimate partner violence (IPV) and family violence, poses a grave and deeply entrenched problem in Jamaican society. This issue is characterised by a pattern of abusive behaviours within intimate relationships and families, resulting in physical, psychological, emotional, and economic harm to victims/survivors. The prevalence of domestic violence in Jamaica underscores the urgent need for comprehensive intervention strategies and heightened awareness as the cycle of violence can lead to a sense of powerlessness and low self-esteem for many. In cases of family violence, children who witness such behaviours may experience developmental challenges and a perpetuation of violence in future generations. Economic factors, including financial dependence on abusers, can trap victims/survivors in abusive relationships, making it challenging to leave or escape the cycle of violence.

Cultural norms and traditional beliefs about masculinity and femininity, as well as societal acceptance of violence as a means of control, contribute to a challenging environment for victims/survivors to seek support. Addressing the problem of domestic violence in Jamaica necessitates a multi-pronged approach including prevention education, public awareness, access to quality essential services, sound legislative framework and enhancing law enforcement training to foster a more effective response.

The response of the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) to Domestic Violence Cases

The JCF plays a crucial role in responding to domestic violence incidents, providing support, ensuring safety, and facilitating the legal process. However, there is a pressing need to enhance the capacity of the training of law enforcement personnel in Jamaica, to address domestic violence comprehensively, encompassing protocols and sensitization necessary for dealing effectively with domestic violence victims/survivors.

Statistics reveal a concerning prevalence of domestic violence cases, which are often underreported due to societal stigma, fear of retribution, and lack of awareness about available resources, which necessitates an immediate and thorough response from the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF). Victims/Survivors of domestic violence face intricate challenges, which may hinder their ability to seek help or navigate the legal system. Therefore, the intricate dynamics of domestic violence requires the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) officers to exhibit a nuanced understanding of power imbalances, survivor-centred approach, and an understanding of cultural value systems when responding to these cases.

Aim of Training

The Domestic Violence Training of Trainers encompasses multiple dimensions, including an in-depth understanding of the dynamics of domestic violence, survivor-centred communication skills, the legal framework surrounding domestic violence, and protocols for ensuring victim/survivor safety. The aim of this training is to equip the JCF with the skills and competencies to respond to domestic violence to promote safer communities and contribute to a supportive environment for the victims/survivors of domestic violence.

By fostering a survivor-centred approach, police officers can make a significant positive impact in the lives of Domestic Violence (DV) victims/survivors. Through the Jamaica Constabulary Force's (JCF), provision of a well-rounded education on domestic violence, the training programme intends to shift attitudes, eliminate biases, and foster a supportive environment for survivors to come forward without fear of judgement or inadequate response.

The training program emphasises;

- (1) The significance of domestic violence training,
- (2) the protocols and sensitization required to handle cases involving victims/survivors
- (3) The procedural practices in investigating domestic violence from the time of appreciating the initial report to the resolution of the incident.

Such a programme has the potential to transform law enforcement's methodology, ensuring that victims/survivors receive the support and protection they deserve while contributing to a secure and more equitable society for all.

Learning Outcomes of the Training

At the end of the course, participants should be able to:

- Understand the fundamental concepts related to gender and gender-based violence (GBV)
- Form a clear understanding of the factors and drivers that contribute to gender-based violence/domestic violence (GBV/DV).
- Strengthen capacities of law enforcement officers to ensure that domestic violence intervention and prevention activities are in keeping with the JCF Standards of Procedures, the Jamaican legislative framework and the international quality standards including the Essential Services Package.
- Prepare law enforcement officers to sensitise and train police personnel in how to receive and appreciate reports of gender-based violence and domestic abuse/violence and how to respond to victims/survivors, witnesses, and perpetrators safely and appropriately
- Adapt an informed approach to Domestic Violence resulting in increased access to resources provided using tools such as the Early Warning Alert and Response System (EWARS)
- Garner the importance of the survivor-centred approach and communication skills and the referral pathway and continuum of care in dealing with victims/survivors of gender-based violence/domestic violence.

Benefits of Training to the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF)

Training the members of the JCF will ensure a greater appreciation and understanding of the following:

1. Victim/Survivor Safety: Domestic violence situations can be highly volatile and dangerous. Proper training helps the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) officers understand the potential risks and take necessary steps to ensure the safety of victims/survivors, their families, and themselves. Safety is paramount and one of the fundamental principles for services delivery in the prevention and response to GBV.

2. Effective Intervention: Domestic violence cases require a delicate approach. Officers are trained in techniques that help them de-escalate situations, communicate effectively with victims/survivors and perpetrators, and make informed decisions that prioritise the well-being of everyone involved.
3. Dynamics of Domestic Violence: Domestic violence often involves complex power dynamics, manipulation, and control. Training helps officers recognize the power relations including those based on gender, the signs of abuse, understand the cycle of violence, thus facilitating the risk assessment that is key to making informed decisions about the actions to take.
4. Trauma-Informed Approach: Victims/survivors of domestic violence may have experienced significant trauma. The Trauma-Informed Approach acknowledges the need to understand the victim/survivor's life experiences in order to deliver the most effective care. Hence officers trained, will interact with sensitivity and empathy, minimising re-traumatization/re-victimization and offer appropriate support.
5. Survivor-Centred Approach: In learning how to apply the Survivor-Centred Approach, the members of the JCF will learn the guiding principles of Safety, Respect, Non-discrimination and Confidentiality and the importance to put the victim/survivor at the decision of the GBV response, to contribute to the healing process. They will also learn how to communicate with survivors/victims using proper survivor-centred communication skills based on empathy.
6. Legislative Framework and Policies on Domestic Violence: Domestic violence laws and regulations vary by jurisdiction. Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) officers must be well-versed in the laws and judicial protocols to appropriately assess situations, provide accurate information to victims/survivors, and assist them in taking the necessary legal actions against perpetrators.
7. Risk Assessment Needs: Effective domestic violence training allows police officers to assess the level of risk in each specific domestic violence case and to accordingly guide the intervention process. This assessment informs decisions about issuing protection or restraining orders, making arrests, or referring victims/survivors to support services, among other actions.

8. Cultural Competency: Domestic violence affects individuals from all backgrounds. Law enforcement officers should receive training that helps them understand cultural nuances, language barriers, and other factors that may influence the dynamics of abuse. In this the police officers will be guided by the JCF Diversity Policy and other relevant policies.
9. Partnership with Support Services: Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) officers will be trained to collaborate with other key stakeholders that are part of the response to and prevention of GBV, both within the of the Ministry of National Security, and other Ministries Departments and Agencies including – among others The Bureau of Gender Affairs that supervises the coordination platforms and has a GBV helpline unit and a GBV shelter Unit, The Ministry of Health and Wellness, the Ministry of Justice and CSOs providing support services to ensure victims/survivors receive comprehensive assistance beyond the immediate law enforcement response. This is based on the interagency SOP and Referral Protocols to guarantee a continuum of care to victims/survivors for Domestic Violence/Gender-Based Violence.
10. Evidence Gathering: Successful domestic violence training will provide officers with information on the proper and correct way to collect evidence effectively and maintain accurate records. The evidence should be packaged so that it can support legal proceedings. Its credibility should stand up to legal scrutiny which in turn will build strong cases against the perpetrators.
11. Data Collection and Documentation: The members of the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) will learn how to manage proper data collection and recording in respect to the safety and confidentiality of the victim/survivor and witnesses.
12. Prevention Education: Domestic Violence Training can include elements of prevention education. Officers can learn how to provide information to potential victims/survivors, through sensitization activities with schools, and communities to raise awareness about domestic violence and promote healthy relationships.
13. Professionalism: By receiving training, JCF officers develop a higher level of professionalism when dealing with sensitive and emotionally charged situations. This can lead to increased public trust and confidence in law enforcement agencies.

14. Reducing Officer Liability: Professionally trained officers are less likely to engage in actions that could result in civil liability. By adhering to best practices and guidelines, they can mitigate the risk of legal repercussions.

Overall, training law enforcement officers to handle domestic violence cases effectively is critical for not only the safety and well-being of victims/survivors, but also for maintaining the integrity of law enforcement interventions and fostering safer communities.

Training Methodologies

The learner-centred approach will be utilised in the domestic violence training. The student/participant will be engaged through lectures with the support of PowerPoint presentations, practical exercises, analysis of case studies and class discussions on scenarios, role-plays, reflections, individual and group assignments and oral presentation, video analysis on gender-based and domestic violence and individual self-directed learning through reference material. This type of methodology will allow for physical, emotional and skill development. Field trips to the DVICARE centres and Police Stations will also be included and used as an assessment and practicum exercises.

Purpose of the Manual

The Domestic Violence Training Manual for the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) is a tool to be utilised by the facilitators to train members of the police force in gender-based violence and domestic violence intervention. The manual will provide comprehensive knowledge of gender-based and domestic violence, which will equip the facilitators tasked with helping to improve the attitude and response of law enforcement to deal with victims/survivors, witnesses, and perpetrators of domestic violence. The content of the manual maintains best practices in line with the survivor-centred approach and local and international standards, which will be skilfully imparted to members of the police force. This manual aims to guide the facilitators to conduct impactful training sessions that will enable police personnel at all levels, including officers on the field, investigators, supervisors, and command staff, to respond appropriately, empathetically, and professionally to domestic violence incidents contributing to a safer and supportive environment for victims/survivors of domestic violence.

Facilitator Preparation Tips

It is important that individuals tasked with the mandate of facilitating domestic violence training of law enforcement officers in Jamaica, be adequately prepared for the training sessions to ensure quality knowledge transfer on the importance of domestic violence intervention, protocols, and the sensitization required to deal with domestic violence victims/survivors, witnesses, and perpetrators, to the participants/trainees.

Prior to the start of the training sessions/workshops, the facilitators should:

- Familiarise themselves thoroughly with the content and materials within the domestic violence training manual and toolkit and reference materials.
- Ensure all necessary equipment, such as projectors and handouts, are readily available in the training rooms to encourage active participation and group discussions.
- Understand the socio-cultural contexts, Jamaican legislative frameworks, and international standards in relation to gender-based violence (GBV)/domestic violence (DV).
- Pay attention to techniques and the elements of participatory adult learning.
- If needed, research and gather supporting statistical data on gender-based violence (GBV)/domestic violence (DV) that can be used to support the sessions, complementing the information already provided in the training package.
- Consider additional facilitation techniques such as role-playing, case studies, group discussions, not currently in the manual that may enhance the subject matter.

Engagement

At the start of each session, facilitators should:

--	--	--

- Start the session by introducing themselves and their background.
- Provide an overview of the aim and training objectives of the session and the session map where possible.
- Encourage a safe, supportive, and respectful learning environment where participants feel comfortable sharing their thoughts and experiences, discussing sensitive topics.
- Use icebreakers or other types of engagement activities to create an inclusive learning environment.
- Conduct reflection and retrieval by asking participants about prior knowledge of concepts.

Facilitation and Assessment

- Use a variety of instructional methods as a part of the facilitation toolkit such as presentations, group discussions, case studies and role-play exercises with guidance from the training manual.
- Focus on adult teaching learning techniques that, based on critical thinking and experiential exercises to enhance the knowledge intake.
- Keep the principles of the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) Standards of Procedure, the Jamaican legislative framework, and the international quality standards as the central focus of the training.
- Remind participants of the relevant resources and references for further reading and support found in the annex of the manual.
- Maintain an engaging and interactive session by encouraging group discussions, questions, and interactions throughout the training.
- Encourage open communication among participants to create a safe space to share their opinions and concerns on gender-based violence/domestic violence. Respect diverse perspectives and encourage mutual respect among participants.
- Foster collaboration and teamwork during group activities and exercises.
- Be Sensitive to emotions as domestic violence training may evoke strong emotions in the participants. In case of need, facilitators must offer their availability to have a private and confidential discussion during pauses from the training or offer other specific human resources such as counsellors to participants who were triggered during the training.

- Highlight self-care and remind participants of the significance of its use in their profession to deal with stress and trauma exposure.
- Incorporate victim/survivor stories or testimonials as examples to provide a human perspective on gender-based/domestic violence. This can create emotional connections and increase participants' understanding of the impact of gender-based/domestic violence and their role in its prevention and response.
- Emphasise the importance of treating victims/survivors with empathy and compassion. Reinforce the idea that law enforcement's response can have a significant impact on a victim/survivor's willingness to seek help.
- Encourage the completion of various assessment and evaluation forms during the course of the training.

Evaluation and Culmination

- Encourage feedback from participants after each session of the training; this can be used to assess its effectiveness and identify areas for improvement. Use this feedback to refine future training sessions.
- End on a positive note. Involving the trainees, recap key takeaways and encourage participants to apply their new knowledge.
- Highlight that domestic violence training is an ongoing process. Encourage participants to stay updated on new legal amendments, protocols, and best practices related to domestic violence response.

Main Learning Objectives and Competencies of each Unit

Units	Learning Objectives and Competencies: At the end of each unit, participants should be able to:
Unit 1- Introduction to Training	Learning Objective: Participants will be able to explain the fundamental principles of adult learning and pedagogy, including creating comprehensive lesson plans, incorporating instructional objectives, content delivery strategies, interactive activities, and assessment methods suitable for police training on domestic violence. Competencies: Instructional Design: Participants will be competent in designing well-structured lesson plans that align with learning objectives and incorporate a variety of teaching methods suitable for diverse Facilitation and Assessment Skills: Participants will demonstrate the competence to effectively facilitate training sessions, manage group dynamics, encourage participation, learning styles assessment techniques and adapt their approach/instructional strategies based on real-time feedback.
Unit 2- Psychology of Self	Learning Objective: Participants will gain an understanding of the importance of self-awareness of their own and other's emotions in law enforcement and domestic violence situations, recognizing personal biases, triggers, and emotional responses and enhancing their ability to de-escalate volatile situations related to domestic violence. Competencies: Self-Reflection: Participants will demonstrate competence in engaging in regular self-reflection to identify their own emotional triggers and biases, contributing to more objective decision-making and interactions and greater ability to actively listen to victims/survivors involved in domestic violence cases, Management of Emotional Response: Participants will develop competences in effectively managing their emotional responses during high-stress situations, making rational decisions, and employing de-escalation techniques to ensure the safety of all parties involved.

Unit 3- Gender-Based Violence	Learning Objective: Participants will gain an understanding of the concepts of gender, root causes and contributing factors of gender-based violence. Awareness of gender-based violence prevalence globally, regionally, and nationally and the consequences of gender-based violence. Competencies: Domains of Gender Relations: Participants will critically evaluate the domains of gender relations that contribute to gender-based violence and the use of the concepts and different types and forms of gender-based violence. Concepts of Gender-Based Violence: Participants will master the use of concepts of gender-based violence (GBV), its types and forms.
Unit 4- Defining Domestic Violence	Learning Objective: Participants will gain an understanding of the definition and scope of domestic violence, identifying its various forms, the physical, sexual, psychological, emotional, economic, and social impact of domestic violence and understanding the dynamics of domestic violence. Competencies: Identification of Domestic Violence: Participants will be able to identify signs and indicators of domestic violence, enabling them to recognize potential cases during their law enforcement duties. Use of Statistical Data: Participants will demonstrate an awareness of statistical national data on domestic violence and how it can be utilised in creating intervention plans.

Unit 5- Factors that form the basis of Domestic Violence	Learning Objective: Participants will gain an understanding of the underlying factors that contribute to domestic violence, including societal, cultural, economic, psychological factors and socialisation. Competencies: Critical Analysis: Participants will critically analyse the interconnected factors that contribute to the occurrence and perpetuation of domestic violence, enabling them to address the root causes effectively. Prevention: Participants will highlight the importance of prevention strategies and interventions, both at the individual and societal levels.
Unit 6- Legislative Framework Relative to Domestic Violence	Learning Objective: Participants will comprehend the relevant laws and regulations pertaining to domestic violence, including protection orders and legal procedures for reporting and prosecution. Competencies: Legal Compliance: Participants will apply their knowledge of domestic violence laws to ensure legal compliance when responding to incidents, collecting evidence, and assisting victims/survivors through legal processes. Risk Assessment: Participants will demonstrate proficiency in conducting risk assessments for domestic violence cases, utilising available data and indicators to evaluate the level of danger to victims/survivors and potential escalation of violence.
Unit 7- Survivor- Centred Approach for providers working with victim/survivo	Learning Objectives: Participants will gain an understanding of the survivor-centred approach and its importance in addressing gender-based violence and how to improve communication skills and the practice

rs of GBV	of empathy when dealing with victims/survivors. Competencies: Knowledge of GBV guiding principles: Participants will develop the ability to use the four (4) gender-based violence (GBV) guiding principles of Safety, Confidentiality, No Discrimination and Respect when addressing victims/survivors of domestic violence. Survivor-centred communication skills: Participants will practise empathy to support survivors in their healing process and facilitate better interchange during the delivery of quality services.
Unit 8- Responding to Domestic Violence	Learning Objective: Participants will develop an awareness of domestic violence policies, protocols, and guidelines which will allow them to intervene safely and ethically in domestic violence situations, considering victim/survivor safety, interact sensitively with victims/survivors and the well-being of all involved parties. Competencies: Victim/Survivor Safety: Participants will identify the unique challenges and barriers faced by victims/survivors of domestic violence during the various steps in the response of the police force such as interviews and safety planning. EIS System: Participants will discuss the use of the JCF Early Intervention System (EIS) in dealing with members of the police force who are victims/survivors or perpetrators.
Unit 9- Interdisciplinary Support to Victims/Survivors and Agencies	Learning Objective: Participants will develop an understanding of the Referral Pathway and protocols and the significance of building collaborative networks to enhance the effectiveness of domestic violence prevention and response efforts.

	Competencies: Continuum of Care: Participants will understand the concept of continuum of care for survivors/victims and its importance in empowering and supporting the victims/survivors in their healing process Strategic Partnership: Participants will display strategic thinking by recognizing opportunities for cross-agency coordinated intervention, initiating partnerships, and adapting approaches based on the strengths and expertise of each agency.

The facilitator will emphasise the relevance of these outcomes and to encourage participants to reflect on how achieving these outcomes might benefit them. The facilitator will then transition to (PPT1 Slide 5), to discuss a Session Map, providing a comprehensive overview of the session's structure and the flow of topics to be covered and highlight the sequence of activities and methodology of lesson such as through PowerPoints, group discussions and formative assessments. The facilitator will then ask the participants if they have any queries so far. (PPT1 Slide 6).

	To begin the planned topics, the facilitator will use (PPT1 Slide 7) to introduce the concept of icebreakers and energizers. The facilitator will explain their significance in creating a positive and interactive learning environment and retain student engagement. The participants should be asked to share examples of how these activities can foster connections among participants and if they have been in any session, business meeting or other event where they do not feel part of the group. The facilitator will inform the participants that “the key role of the trainer is to ensure students are engaged in order to participate in the learning.” The facilitator will then focus the attention of the participants to the picture on PPT1 Slide 7 and ask them to describe what they see in the picture. (4 persons but only three connected by holding hands). This idea will reinforce the disconnection an individual may feel with a group learning environment. The students will then be placed in groups if not already in them and asked to consider their team name which will be written on a flipchart or whiteboard. Insert icebreaker activity here from slide. The facilitator will inform students of the links and similarities of icebreakers and energisers. Facilitator will utilise PPT1 Slide 8 to present a picture of a desert island. The facilitator will ask participants to offer examples of if you were stranded on a desert island what would your personal needs be? The facilitator will encourage participants to analyse and discuss how this scenario relates to the lesson's content. Foster critical thinking by prompting them to identify parallels between the scenario and real-life situations. Link lesson here to adult learning techniques. The facilitator will display PPT1 Slide 9 to introduce a visual of Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs. and explain its relevance to the session's topic and how it impacts human behaviour and motivation. The facilitator will inform the participants that: “When students belong to a group more willing to reach the goal of “self-actualisation” where a good icebreaker can assist. Also adult learners have a lot to think about and should be factored into lessons.” The facilitator will encourage participants to consider how understanding these needs can influence their approach to the subject matter.

	The facilitator will move to Activity Exercise 1 - PPT1 Slide 10 on the Benefits of Energizers and Icebreakers. The facilitator will ask students in their groups to list the benefits of energisers and icebreakers and divide participants into groups. Prompt them to discuss and list the benefits of energizers and icebreakers. Encourage them to share individual experiences or insights on how these activities positively impact engagement and learning. The facilitator will introduce a visual/picture for the participants to focus on (Bored children in the classroom) on PPT1 Slide 11. The participants will be asked to Say What You See. Participants should be encouraged to brainstorm creative solutions and engage in a lively discussion on ways to combat boredom and maintain engagement during learning sessions. This will reinforce necessity for icebreakers and energisers. To continue the session, the facilitator will present PPT1 Slide 12 showing 9 Ideas to Engage, offering nine practical strategies to maintain engagement during any training session. The facilitator will discuss each idea in detail, providing examples and encouraging participants to contribute their thoughts or additional strategies. The facilitator will inform the participants that: “Teaching is an art form. Great teachers hold our attention, make us laugh, help us to fully understand complex subject matter and, most of all, inspire us. Gaining this kind of engagement from your students takes practice and experience, but even if you’re new to teaching, there are steps you can take to make your workshops or training as interesting as possible. Ready to set aside those snore-inducing lectures, and make your events fun and interactive? Start with these 9 fun workshop ideas: 1. Make it relevant – (Explain content below) First and foremost, to earn people’s attention, you need to make sure the content you’re delivering is useful to them. How do you learn exactly what they want out of your course? Ask them. Conduct some initial research with your target customers to shape your course content, or send a pre-event survey to your attendees so they can pinpoint problems or topics they’d like to hear about. On the day of your training or workshop, kick off by giving a brief overview of what attendees are going to learn and how those skills will help them achieve their goals. 2. Accommodate different learning styles - (Explain content below) People learn in different ways. Some of us are visual learners who prefer pictures, videos, and diagrams, while others respond to spoken and written word, music, logic, or even physical activities. To create an inclusive learning environment, try to combine traditional linguistic teaching methods with audio and visual presentations, written handouts, interactive tasks, and group work. 3. Change the room layout -(Explain content below, also you may have already facilitated this, make this comment) Training rooms are always laid out in the same way – rows of tables and chairs. Challenge the convention and surprise your attendees by perhaps providing beanbags instead of chairs, standing podium tables, or tables with just a few chairs to encourage small groups. Your choice of venue can also have an impact on engagement. A space full of light, colour and texture can prove far more inspiring than a bland, windowless meeting room. 4. Use props – (Explain content below and have a prop with you if possible) Props can make your teaching even more engaging. These could be practical that literally represent your subject matter (think scales, an abacus, or a mannequin) or they could be ridiculous (try a rubber chicken or magic wand). Props liven up your session, and will help people remember what they learned. Your training or workshop might be serious, but people learn best when they are having fun. 5. Play games - (Explain content below – have you already played some type of game quiz, emphasise this is why you have done this) Need to keep your attendees focused? Tap into their competitive sides. Puzzles or riddles, crosswords, memory games, ordering tasks — all are great ways to keep your attendees engaged and on-task. For added drama, impose a time limit. Try introducing a quick quiz at the end of each content section, helping recap on what’s been learned, and offer a small prize for the winner. 6. Tell stories or use metaphors - (Explain content below, possibly tell them a story that relates to this topic) Whatever you’re teaching, try to make it relatable to everyday life by using real examples, case studies, and creative metaphors. People will sit still for hours watching a movie — why not steal some cinematic tricks? Another bonus: metaphors and stories are central to the way memory works. A great story will stick in your attendees minds much longer than a chart. 7. Play music - (Explain content below) Music can set the mood and get attendees energised before your session and during breaks. Play something upbeat to pump them up and lower it back down to let them know it is time to start. You can also use music during the session – soothing classical pieces help people concentrate while completing tasks or group work. 8. Keep it short (Explain content below) One of the best ways to keep your audience engaged is to not overload them with information. Give them too much, and their brains will simply shut off. Either make your session a maximum of two hours or, if it is taking place over the course of a day, schedule in plenty of short breaks. Give attendees a chance to get up, walk around, and grab a cup of coffee. Give them time to write and organise notes and assist them by providing pens, pads, sticky notes, and highlighters. 9. Provide recognition and reward Attendees will be more motivated to successfully complete the course if their efforts are recognised — and if they have something to show for it at the end. Let attendees know they will receive personalised certificates to mark their participation. You should also consider extra incentives such as a competition or small prizes for the best students. Again: tap into those competitive streaks! Conclusion Training is as much about entertaining your audience as informing them. Make your training or workshops lively, varied, fun and unexpected and your participants will learn more — and be more likely to come back for more.” The facilitator will then engage the participants in an activity to test retention during learning - Activity Exercise 2 found on (.ppts 1 Slide 13-16) called Retention during a Learning Episode. The facilitator will instruct the participants to recall words shown to them to discuss the importance in retention and the primacy-recency effect on learning. To continue the session, the facilitator will explore the implications for teaching delving into the concept ‘Prime Time 1’. The facilitator will emphasise that new skills (only correct information) should be taught during this time as most likely to be remembered. The facilitator will then explain that this should be followed by down time before ‘Prime Time 2’. (PPT1 Slides 18-19) The facilitator will note that the best way to engage a learner group is to carefully plan time and when new knowledge should be imparted for optimum retention. (PPT1 Slide 20) The facilitator will then move to discussing other possible classroom strategies for longer class periods (PPT1 Slide 21) and that the degree of retention will vary during a learning episode and how to optimise this. (PPT1 Slide 22) The facilitator will then open questions about topics that have been explored to the participants and seek responses (PPT1 Slide 23) The facilitator will then review the aim and learning outcomes that were given to the participants at the beginning to ascertain if knowledge transfer took place. (PPT1 Slide 24 - 25) To culminate the session, the facilitator will highlight the references utilised (PPT1 Slide 26). and ask the participants if they have any queries. (PPT1 Slide 27).

Activity Exercise 1 Role Play Exercise - Icebreakers	Learning Objective for Exercise: Role play exercises enhance participants' skills in engaging their trainees to capture their attention from the commencement of the class. Instructions given by Facilitators: The facilitator will select some participants and ask them to produce an icebreaker or engagement exercise See instructions on (PPT1 - slide 7) The facilitator will ask students in their groups to list the benefits of energisers and icebreakers and divide participants into groups. Prompt them to discuss and list the benefits of energizers and icebreakers. Encourage them to share personal experiences or insights on how these activities positively impact engagement and learning.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	Why are icebreakers important? What does student engagement mean to you, and why is it important in education? What are the barriers to student engagement, and how can they be overcome?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Emphasis should be placed on the importance of student engagement in improving learning outcomes. Instructors should be encouraged to diversify their teaching methods and activities to cater to different learning styles.
Activity Exercise 2 Retention Exercise	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of this role play exercise is to give participants a chance to work on their ability to recall information Instructions given by Facilitators: (PPT1 Slides 13-17) The initial Instructions can be seen on (PPT1 Slide 13) The facilitator will first ask the participants to write on a sheet of paper the numbers 1 through to 12 in a list format. (PPT1 Slide 14) The facilitator will provide a list of words or series of letters numbered 1-12 for the participants to view for 12 seconds. (PPT1 Slide 15) The facilitator will then remove the list and ask the participants to recall as many of the words or series of letters that they saw and write them down with the corresponding number. At the end of the exercise, the facilitator will garner feedback from the participants to determine how many words were remembered. The facilitator will then discuss the theory behind the results of the participants and note that the participants experienced what is known as the primacy-recency effect. The facilitator will suggest that most participants tend to remember the first three words and the last three words but often do not remember the middle set of words. (PPT1 Slide 16) The facilitator will then expand the discussion on the primacy-recency effect where persons tend to remember best what comes first and the second best that which comes last. (PPT1 Slide 17)

Take-Away Points from Exercise:	According to the primacy-recency effect, persons tend to remember best what comes first, the second best that which comes last and the least that which comes in the middle. (PPT1 Slide 17) By understanding how the primacy-recency effect influences memory, educators can structure learning experiences to maximise retention and engagement such as starting a lesson or presentation with a strong, engaging introduction. This sets the stage for learning and captures attention. Introducing key concepts or providing an overview early on can help students remember fundamental information better.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How can technology be leveraged to increase student engagement? How can you personalise your teaching to better connect with individual students? What role does feedback play in fostering student engagement?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on.

--	--	--

	Key Messages/Takeaways: The role of feedback, both from students and instructors, should be highlighted towards enhancing engagement. One should stress the importance of building strong teacher-student relationships to foster engagement. A culture of continuous reflection and adaptation in teaching methodology is important to improve engagement.

--	--	--

Unit 1 – Introduction to Training

TOPIC: Introduction to Course Design (Writing Training Plans)

SUB-TOPICS	Education vs. Training Design Specification The Training Cycle Course File
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	● Learn the content headings to be included within in a course design specification ● Identify essential course related documentation to be contained within a course file. ● Gain a foundational understanding of course design principles, concepts, and terminology. ● Learn how to assess the needs, expectations, and prior knowledge of your target audience. ● Develop the ability to formulate clear and measurable learning objectives. ● Identify and apply various teaching and assessment methods based on course goals and student needs.
Competencies:	Needs Assessment: The ability to identify the learning needs of the target audience. Learning Objective Development: The skill to create clear, specific, and measurable learning objectives. Content Organization: Proficiency in structuring content to promote effective learning. Instructional Strategy Selection: The capability to choose appropriate teaching methods and assessment strategies. Continuous Improvement: The practice of assessing and refining course design based on feedback and outcomes.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture presentations with PowerPoint presentation Case Studies Role Play Exercise Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	PowerPoint Slide Deck - Entitled “ PPT3 Introduction to Course Design ” Projector
Handouts:	Not Applicable
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the aim and learning outcomes (PPT3 Slides 2-3) to emphasise what participants will gain from the presentation. On (PPT3 Slide 4), the facilitator will show the "Session Map" to provide an overview of the lesson structure and flow. They will briefly explain what participants can expect throughout the session. Icebreaker/Engagement Activity - Math Problem - problem solving activity to test critical thinking components. The facilitator will promote reflection and retrieval by asking the participants what they know about the topic. (PPT3 Slide 5) The facilitator will transition to the “Introduction” (PPT3 Slide 6), to the subject area of the session delving into what must be done before designing any training programme. The facilitator will focus attention on the need for a Training Needs Assessment (TNA). The facilitator will continue the session, by defining and distinguishing between education and training by reading the points on the slide. (PPT3 slide 7) Emphasis will be placed on the fact that education encompasses a broader scope of knowledge acquisition, while training focuses on specific skills or tasks. The facilitator will use examples to illustrate the differences. Participants will be encouraged to share their perceptions or experiences regarding the distinctions between education and training. Next, the facilitator will utilise visual representation through a pie chart (PPT3 slide 8) to convey the way that design specification and course file relate to other concepts in designing a course. The facilitator will explain that although the participants are already familiar with the concepts Training Needs, Aims and Learning Outcomes, Assessment and Lesson Plans however, but design specification and course file are all integral when creating a course design. The facilitator will also provide a reminder that Learning Outcomes must be measurable to support any incorporated assessment. The session will continue with focused attention on the Training Cycle (PPT3 slide 9) via a flow chart, where the facilitator will identify and explain the phases of the training cycle and where design specification and course file falls or ‘sits’ within the life of the cycle. The facilitator should provide examples for each phase to elucidate its role in ensuring effective learning and development and encourage participants to discuss how each phase interconnects and influences the overall success of a training program. The facilitator will then engage the participants by delivering instructions for a reflection activity (PPT3 slide 10). This activity will allow the participants to identify what considerations they should make designing training courses. The facilitator will provide clarity on the objectives of the activity. The participants will be asked to share some of the ideas that they have come up with. After the reflection activity, the facilitator will draw the participants attention to Design Specification and Course File (PPT3 slide 11) The facilitator will explain that a “Course File contains all the information you will need to organise and deliver the training. It is written in a way so anyone tasked with delivering the training can take it from the shelf and know training venues, lesson content, resources, contacts and so on. Furthermore Programme Specification – gives instructors high level information used for credit rating purposes and auditing.” To reinforce this information the facilitator will then introduce the relationship and differences between the course file and programme specification (PPT3 slide 12) The facilitator will inform the participants that “The Programme Specification and the Course File are two separate entities. These are however interlinked as the Programme Specification is

	the foundation stone that the Course File is built upon. Course Files and Programme specifications are used for two reasons. Firstly, police officers who are instructors within training can be returned to operations after a short period resulting in possible lost knowledge due to poor records and lack of course maintenance. Secondly, course evaluations identified duplication of content among trainers delivering on the same course. Once Programme specifications are written they show the content of inputs and how courses fit together. There are some duplications between the Course file and Programme Specification however they are both needed for different purposes. The Course File contains all the information that you would need to organise and deliver the Training. It should be written so that anyone who is tasked with delivering the training can take it from the shelf and know teaching venues, lesson content, what resources are required, who to contact etc. The Programme Specification should be a part of the course file as it gives the instructors high level information that would be used for auditing. Any changes made to the course must not only be recorded in the course file but also in the Design Specification. The template for a Course File Build including the information that should be contained within a Programme Specification can be found in students notes for this lesson.” To continue the session, the facilitator will look at the components of the Design Specification - background, rationale, values and ethics principles, entry criteria, programme and learning outcomes, structures and timings and quality assurance. (PPT3 slide 13) The facilitator will discuss each in detail. The facilitator will then transition to exploring the components of the Course File in detail conducting a round robin to ascertain ideas and thoughts from each participant about the aspects being taught. (PPT3 slide 14) The facilitator will highlight how a well-structured course file aids trainers in delivering organised and comprehensive training sessions. The facilitator will then give the participants a course design specification activity - Activity Exercise 1 (PPT3 slides 15-16) This activity involves participants working collaboratively to list content that can be included in a course design specification for a given training scenario or topic. The facilitator will instruct the participants to identify essential course related documentation to be contained within a course file. Time should be allocated for presentations of the findings. To culminate the session the facilitator will reiterate the aims and learning outcomes (PPT3 slide 17) for the session and discover whether they were met and knowledge transfer took place.

Activity Exercise 1 Create Course Specification	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to allow participants to incorporate knowledge of course file and design specification and apply them to lesson content creation. Instructions given by Facilitators The participants will be divided into small groups, where they will be instructed to create lesson content by using a blank design specification document and consider how they would complete the document. They will be asked to choose a topic such as bullying in Jamaica in urban and rural areas and create Course Specification using the key elements that they have learnt in the lesson so far. The facilitator should allocate sufficient time for participants to engage actively in the activity, which may involve applying the Training Cycle phases. Group discussions should be facilitated afterward, allowing participants to present their insights and findings derived from the activity and explain what they would propose to include in each category within the design specification document. The participants must identify course related documentation to be contained in a course file and identify essential course related documentation to be contained within a course file.
Key Takeaway points for Exercise:	The course file in training programmes is a comprehensive blueprint outlining the structure, content, and learning outcomes. Design specifications ensure clarity, consistency, and alignment with learning objectives in training program creation. Both course files and design specifications serve as roadmaps, aiding in the development of engaging, effective training programs.

Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How does a course file contribute to effective training program development? How do design specifications ensure alignment with learning objectives? How can a well-structured course file positively impact the delivery of a training program? In what ways do design specifications influence the design and development of training materials? How can feedback from learners and trainers contribute to the enhancement of course files and design specifications?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Understand your students' needs, expectations, and prior knowledge to tailor the course effectively. Establish specific, measurable, and achievable learning outcomes to guide course design. Use various strategies to encourage student participation, critical thinking, and problem-solving and continuously assess and adapt your course based on student feedback and outcomes. Put students at the centre of your course design, making their learning experience a priority.

TOPIC: Lesson Planning

SUB-TOPICS	What is a lesson plan? Structure of lesson plans Importance of planning lessons
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Understand the importance of effective lesson planning in training. Demonstrate the ability to create a well-structured lesson plan. Identify strategies for engaging learners and addressing diverse needs. Apply assessment and evaluation techniques to measure training effectiveness. Develop the confidence to adapt and improvise during training sessions.
Competencies:	Curriculum Development: Create structured and effective lesson plans. Facilitation Skills: Engage learners, maintain their interest, and adapt to their needs. Assessment and Feedback: Measure the success of training and provide constructive feedback. Adaptability: Handle unexpected situations and adjust the lesson plan, as necessary.

Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled- “PPT4 Lesson Planning” Projector; Handout
Handouts:	Blank Lesson Plan
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the aim (PPT4 slide 2) and learning outcomes (PPT4 slide 3) for this session. Make learning outcomes specific, clear, and aligned with the aim. An explanation of how achieving these objectives will benefit the participants in their roles as domestic violence trainers. The facilitator will then present an overview of the session structure and flow, providing a roadmap for what participants can expect through a Session Map (PPT4 slide 4) The lesson will continue with a definition of Lesson Planning (PPT4 slide 6) and why it is important to have as a trainer. Emphasis should be placed on the importance of thorough preparation and how it contributes to the success of the session. Examples may be used here to share insights into your approach to lesson planning and the steps you took to design the session. The session will continue with a discussion on Information Needed To Deliver Lesson exploring the essential information, materials, and resources required for effective lesson delivery. (PPT4 slide 7) The facilitator will then explore the Structure of Lesson Plan (PPT4 slide 8-10), highlighting key sections such as introduction, main content, activities, and conclusion. Mention of any key challenges or considerations that can influence lesson planning will be done here. A blank Lesson Plan Template (PPT4 slide 11) will then be shared with the participants and a detailed description of the requirements of each section discussed. The facilitator will offer guidance on how to adapt the template to different topics and contexts. The facilitator will introduce Activity Exercise 1 (PPT4 slide 12) to the participants. The purpose of the activity, how it relates to the learning outcomes, and its expected duration will be related to the participants. Encourage active participation and clarify any instructions or expectations. The session will culminate with a revisit of the aims and learning objectives to reinforce their importance. (PPT4 slide 14 - 15) and to evaluate if the aim was met. If time allows Activity 2 can be utilised.

Activity Exercise 1 Group Activity Lesson Plan Creation	Learning Objective for Exercise: This role play exercise aims to enhance participants' skills in the creation of lessons according to important aspects that should be included. Instructions given by Facilitators: Utilising the blank lesson plan template, have participants work individually or in small groups to create a lesson plan for a specific topic on the blank template provided. Ask participants in their groups to deliver a short training session based on their lesson plans. Encourage peer feedback.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	Why is lesson planning important in the training context? What are the key components of an effective lesson plan? How can trainers engage different learning styles and preferences?

Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Effective lesson planning empowers trainers to confidently deliver engaging and impactful training sessions. It ensures organisation and clarity.
Activity Exercise 2 Role Play Exercise (Adaptability of Lessons)	Learning Objectives of Exercise: This role play exercise aims to enhance participants' skills in adaptability of lessons to suit the needs of their learners. Instructions given by Facilitators Divide participants into pairs or small groups. Assign each group a scenario where one person plays the trainer and the other plays a challenging or disinterested learner. Other unexpected challenges can be incorporated with some groups such as technical difficulties. Trainers must adapt their lesson plans in real-time to engage the learner and deliver the content effectively.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What strategies can trainers use to assess and evaluate training effectiveness? How can trainers adapt their lesson plans during a training session?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Lesson planning is the foundation of effective training. Engage learners by considering diverse learning styles and preferences. Assessment and evaluation are crucial to measure training effectiveness and make improvements. Trainers must be adaptable, ready to handle unexpected situations, and

MODULE ONE: PREPARATION OF TRAINERS

Unit 1 - Introduction to Training TOPIC: Introduction to Assessment

SUB-TOPICS	Types of Assessment Assessment Key Principles of Assessment
-------------------	---

	Assessment Planning Outcome Criteria Assessment Criteria Assessment Rubrics Activity Assessment Criteria
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives:	Develop a comprehensive understanding of assessment principles, including validity, reliability, fairness, and authenticity. Identify and differentiate between various assessment types, such as formative, summative, diagnostic, and authentic assessment. Learn how to design and use various assessment tools, such as rubrics, checklists, self-assessments, and peer assessments. Develop the ability to plan assessment strategies that align with instructional goals and objectives. Acquire skills in collecting and recording assessment data accurately and ethically. Learn how to provide constructive and timely feedback to learners and how to grade assessments fairly and consistently. Understand how to adapt assessments for diverse learners and differentiate assessment methods to meet individual needs. Learn how to communicate assessment results effectively to learners, colleagues, and stakeholders.
Competencies:	● Develop the ability to design clear, well-structured assessments that align with learning objectives and standards. ● Analyse assessment data to identify trends, areas of improvement, and learner performance. ● Provide meaningful and constructive feedback to learners to support their growth and development. ● Develop the skills to address assessment-related challenges and adapt assessment methods as needed.

	● Be aware of and sensitive to the cultural and diversity-related aspects of assessment, including avoiding bias and stereotypes. ● Collaborate effectively with colleagues to share assessment strategies and best practices. ● Adapt assessment methods to the evolving needs of learners and the changing educational landscape. ● Ensure that all assessment practices align with legal and ethical guidelines, safeguarding learner rights and privacy.

Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and displaying the "Aim" on (PPT5 Slide 2). An explanation of the aim of the lesson, emphasising its importance and relevance to the participants. They will transition to PPT5 Slide 3 to present the "Learning Outcomes" and discuss the specific learning outcomes that participants will achieve by the end of the session. On PPT5 Slide 4, the facilitator will show the "Session Map" to provide an overview of the lesson structure and flow. They will briefly explain what participants can expect throughout the session. Next, the facilitator will introduce the first activity, Activity Exercise 1 - The "Wrap Attack Competition," and display PPT5 Slides 6 to 9. They will provide clear instructions for the activity and facilitate its execution, ensuring participants are engaged and understand the rules. After completing the activity, the facilitator will transition to PPT5 Slide 10 for the "Assessment" section. They will explain the purpose of assessment in the context of the lesson. Proceeding to PPT5 Slide 11, the facilitator will elaborate on "The Purpose of assessment", emphasising its role in measuring learning outcomes. Moving on to PPT5 Slide 12, the facilitator will introduce the "Types of Assessment." To continue the session, the facilitator will present PPT5 Slide 13, focusing on "Assessment Methods" explaining various methods used in assessment and their relevance. Displaying PPT5 Slide 14, the facilitator will introduce the "Key Principles of Assessment." They will discuss these principles and their significance in the assessment process. Transitioning to PPT5 Slide 15, "Assessment Planning," the facilitator will explain the steps involved in effective assessment planning. Proceeding to PPT5 Slide 16, "Outcome vs Criteria," the facilitator will differentiate between outcomes and assessment criteria. To reinforce this section of the session, the facilitator will discuss "Assessment Criteria" on PPT5 Slide 17, explaining how criteria are established and used in assessment. Presenting PPT5 Slide 18, "Assessment Rubrics," the facilitator will then elaborate on the use of rubrics in assessment and how they help in evaluating performance. Showing "Associated Scoring Rubric" on PPT5 Slide 21, the facilitator will explain how the scoring rubric aligns with the assessment criteria. Proceeding to PPT5 Slide 22, the next activity in the lesson - Activity Exercise 2, the facilitator will explain the purpose and rules of this activity. Finally, the facilitator will conclude the session with PPT5 Slides 24 - 25, summarising the lesson's aim and learning outcomes, and inviting any questions or discussions from the participants.

Activity Exercise 1	Learning Objective for Exercise:

Group Activity Activity - Wrap Attack Competition	The objective of this exercise is to allow participants to work towards high quality of the assignment which will be assessed based on specific criteria. Instructions given by Facilitators: Participants will be divided into groups where they will be given two sheets of wrapping paper or legal size paper; sellotape; balloon and scissors. They will be asked to blow the balloon and creatively wrap and decorate the package. The balloon should not show. Incentives can be given for the winner of the competition. Each team/group will have ten minutes to complete. Groups will be judged on the following criteria: • Fastest time? • Neatest package? • Least materials? • Most artistic? • Most original? • Best disguise of contents? • Combination of any of the above?
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	How can trainers engage in collaboration with colleagues to share assessment strategies and best practices? What is the primary purpose of assessment in the context of training, and how does it relate to the learning objectives? How can assessment be integrated as an ongoing, integral part of the training process rather than an isolated event? What strategies can trainers employ to provide constructive and timely feedback to learners?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Assessment is a continuous process of gathering information to improve teaching and learning. Assessment serves various purposes, including understanding learner progress, guiding instruction, and providing feedback. Effective assessment should align with the learning objectives.

Activity Exercise 2 Assessment of Subject	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to ask the participants to deliver an assessment criterion on a subject. Instructions given by Facilitators: Participants will be asked to deliver an input on a subject by doing the following based on the lessons taught: • Write two learning outcomes (at each level in Bloom's Taxonomy); • Design assessment criteria to establish clear and unambiguous standards of achievement for each learning outcome; • Design associated rubrics to facilitate consistency of marking and score determination; • Feedback your proposed assessment to the class.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How can trainers choose the right assessment methods for their training context? What types of assessments are most suitable for your training program, and how can they be aligned with your learning objectives? How can trainers ensure fairness and equity in assessments, considering the cultural and diversity-related aspects? Can you think of specific examples from your training context where effective assessment has made a significant difference in teaching and learning outcomes?

--	--	--

	Key Messages/Takeaways: Assessment should provide learners with meaningful feedback to support their growth and development. Consideration of cultural and diversity-related aspects is vital in assessment to avoid bias and ensure fairness. Assessment should adhere to legal and ethical guidelines, ensuring privacy and learner rights. Assessment data can inform decisions about instructional adjustments. Collaborating with colleagues and sharing assessment strategies can enhance teaching practices. Continual professional development is essential in the field of assessment due to its dynamic nature. There are numerous assessment methods - diagnostic, formative and summative.

Unit 1 – Introduction to Training

TOPIC: Introduction to Evaluation

SUB-TOPICS	What is Evaluation? Kirkpatrick's Model of Evaluation Importance of Evaluation to training sessions
-------------------	--

Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Understand the importance of evaluation in training delivery. Identify the different levels of evaluation (e.g., Kirkpatrick's model). Develop skills in designing and implementing effective evaluation methods. Interpret and analyse evaluation data to make informed decisions. Improve training programs based on evaluation results.
Competencies:	Evaluation design: Assess learning outcomes and ascertain what aspects may be evaluated to ensure a comprehensive and fair evaluation of students' performance. Feedback and communication: Ability to provide constructive input to students, fostering growth, and maintaining an open dialogue to enhance learning experiences. Decision-making: Guide educators in making informed choices, adapting teaching strategies, and addressing learning gaps efficiently based on evaluation
Training Techniques:	Lecture presentation with powerpoint Group work instructions Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled “PPT6 Introduction to Evaluation” Projector;
Handouts:	Not Applicable
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will commence the session by introducing the aim of the session on (PPT6 Slide 2) and proceed to outline the learning outcomes on (PPT6 Slide 3). The facilitator will then use (PPT6 Slide 4), to present and discuss the session map for the structure of how the aim of the lesson will be achieved and how the topic will be discussed through PowerPoint discussion, group discussion and through formative assessment. An icebreaker may be considered at this stage. The facilitator will promote reflection and retrieval by asking participants what they know about the topic and address any misconceptions. (PPT6 Slide 5) The facilitator will delve into understanding of what is Evaluation. The facilitator will first ask the participants if they can say what the definition is. (PPT6 Slide 6). After the answers are received, the facilitator will discuss the definition on (PPT6 Slide 7) to see if it ties in with what the participants contributed. The facilitator will then engage participants in group work Activity Exercise 1 to get them to provide details on “Why Evaluate?” and “What should be evaluated?” on (PPT6 Slide 8). After feedback is given from this group exercise, the facilitator will state that they will be looking at this and seeing how it compares to the next few slides. To reinforce this, the facilitator will discuss why evaluation should be done using (PPT6 Slide 9). Using the example of a business, ask the participants the following questions: Has the training been of benefit to the staff? Have they learned the knowledge/skills expected? Is the business running more efficiently etc. due to the training being undertaken? Has this filled in the gap – remember this will have been identified through the? Has the end justifies the means – has the training been cost effective? If the needs are being met are we establishing continuous improvements whilst doing so? Can these be made more efficient with changes being applied for the future of training/strategies? Using (PPT6 Slide 10-11), the facilitator will then delve into the specifics of the type of elements that may be evaluated - "What are we evaluating?" This includes encouraging discussions and examples such as a class and encourage them to answer the following questions (PPT6 Slide 10): How has the training been received by the ‘students’? Has the venue/facilities/resources been appropriate? Did the training meet the needs? The students may have attended the training, but how does the organisation know that they have learnt anything? Have the students' skills developed? Whether it be something new or an improvement in an area already learnt. The facilitator will continue this topic on what is being evaluated utilising (PPT6 Slide 11) and examples. The following questions should be used to evoke critical thinking among participants: Has the training had an impact on someone’s attitude or behaviour? What type of course do you think this could be? Has the results shown an improvement on the KPIs – Key Performance Indicators for the organisation ROI – Has the training realised a return of investment thus in turn has there been a cost benefit to the organisation A Positive or Negative training experience can have an impact on the corporate image of the organisation. Word of mouth is the best form of marketing - remember. To continue the session, the facilitator will introduce and give an overview of Kirkpatrick's Model of Evaluation (PPT6 Slide 12) The facilitator will give an overview of the model (PPT6 Slide 12) and read out aloud each of the levels - Reaction, Learning, Transfer, and Result - to be reviewed over the next 4 slides (PPT6 Slides 13-16) The facilitator will inform the participants of the following: Level 1: Reaction level (Feelings) – Are the learners satisfied with the training they received? Level 2: Learning (Learning) - Have the learners acquired the necessary skills and knowledge?. Level 3: Behaviour/ Performance (Performance) – Are the learners applying their knowledge and skills in their subsequent job performance?

	Level 4: Organisational/ Results (Results) - The effect the training has had on the business/ organisation results Donald Kirkpatrick was writing his thesis in 1952 when he became interested in Evaluating Training Programmes. In a series of articles he published in 1959 he prescribed a four stage model for evaluating training programmes but he did not publish his book – ‘Evaluating Training Programs – The Four Levels’ until 1994. His theories on Evaluation have been discussed by many people within education and training evaluation. In essence this model is praised for being easy to follow and can be applied within all training organisations carrying out evaluation. The facilitator will then proceed to explain each level of the Kirkland Model of Evaluation in more detail using (PPT6 Slides 13-16) The facilitator will examine the first level Reaction (PPT6 Slide 13), the second level Learning using (PPT6 Slide 14), the third level Transfer using (PPT6 Slide 15) and the fourth level Result using (PPT6 Slide 16). To continue the session, the facilitator will open the following questions (PPT6 Slide 17) to the class in order to gain responses: ● Explain the need to evaluate training programmes? ● Describe the Kirkpatrick - Model of Evaluation ? To culminate the session, the facilitator will remind the participants of the Aim of the session (PPT6 Slide 18) and the Learning Outcomes (PPT6 Slide 19) to ascertain if knowledge transfer took place.
Activity Exercise 1 Why and What of Evaluation Group activity	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to ascertain what participants think are the reasons evaluation should take place and what aspects of any class, project or event may be evaluated. Instructions given by Facilitators: The facilitators will divide the participants in groups. Each group will be asked to brainstorm and provide details on Why Evaluate? and What should we evaluate? See (PPT6 Slide 8). Each group will select one participant to present feedback from each group. The facilitator will conduct a group discussion then explore how the points from the groups compare with the information on (PPT6 Slides 9 to 11).

Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	Why is evaluation important in the context of training delivery? What aspects of training delivery should be evaluated?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Evaluation is an integral part of effective training delivery. Evaluation provides valuable insights for program or workshop improvement.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How do you communicate evaluation results to stakeholders? How can you use evaluation data to improve training programs? How can you design and implement effective evaluation methods? What are the various levels of evaluation and their significance?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: All levels of evaluation (such as Kirkland Model - reaction, learning, behaviour, results) are important to training effectiveness. Effective communication of evaluation results is crucial for stakeholder buy-in and program improvement. A continuous improvement mindset is essential in the training and evaluation process.

Unit 2 - Psychology of Self

- Facilitator Guideline - Emotional Intelligence
- Facilitator Guideline - Psychology of Self
- Facilitator Guideline - Counselling vs. Mediation

--	--	--

Unit 2 – Psychology of Self

TOPIC: Emotional Intelligence

SUB-TOPICS	What is Emotional Intelligence and Emotion? Which emotion best describes your personality? The Emotional Self FQ vs IQ (Cognitive vs. Emotional Intelligence) Benefits of EQ in the Workplace
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	• Participants will learn to recognize and understand their own emotions, biases, and triggers, enabling better self-regulation and decision-making. • Improve participants' ability to communicate effectively, build rapport, and de-escalate situations through empathy, active listening, and conflict resolution. • Equip participants with tools to cope with high-stress situations, reduce emotional reactivity, and maintain composure.

	● Promote empathy towards diverse individuals and communities, fostering trust and understanding. ● Teach conflict resolution skills to defuse tense situations and promote peaceful resolutions. ● Improve decision-making by considering emotional factors and ethical considerations in various life scenarios.
Competencies:	Self-Awareness: Participants will be able to recognize their own emotions and understand how these emotions can impact their behaviour and decision-making. Self-Regulation: Develop the ability to manage and control emotions in high-pressure situations, preventing impulsive reactions. Empathy: Cultivate the capacity to understand and relate to the emotions and perspectives of others, promoting positive interactions. Interpersonal Skills: Enhance communication, active listening, and conflict resolution skills for better relationships and communication with others. Stress Management: Develop strategies to cope with stress, maintain emotional balance, and prevent burnout in various life situations. Ethical Decision-Making: Incorporate emotional intelligence into ethical decision-making, considering the welfare of all stakeholders.
Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture Presentation with powerpoint support Exercises – Utilisation of Scenarios/Case Studies Role Play Exercise Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled “ PPT9 - Emotional Intelligence through Leadership ” Projector;
Handouts:
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objectives. (PPT9 Slide 2) The facilitator will introduce the activity, What Would You Do? , prompting participants to consider hypothetical situations and their emotional reactions. [Self-Association] (PPT9 Slides 3-4) Following the activity, the facilitator will lead a discussion, inviting participants to share their responses. The facilitator will continue the session by defining emotional intelligence (PPT9 Slide 5) emphasising its significance in personal and professional contexts. Examples will be provided to illustrate the concept. Next, the facilitator will discuss the nature of emotions, exploring their definition and impact on behaviour and decision-making. (PPT9 Slide 6) Participants will be encouraged by the facilitator to engage in self-reflection, identifying and sharing an emotion that aligns with their personality traits (PPT9 Slide 7). To continue the session, the facilitator will delve into the concept of the emotional self, discussing its contribution to identity and interpersonal interactions. (PPT9 Slide 8) The facilitator will then explain the distinction between cognitive intelligence (IQ) and emotional intelligence (EQ), highlighting their respective roles and importance. (PPT9 Slide 9) Participants will be encouraged to ask questions if they do not understand. Utilising (PPT9 Slide 10), the facilitator will introduce Goleman's five key elements of emotional intelligence (Self-awareness; Self Management; Motivation; Empathy and Relationship Management), providing a brief overview and initiating discussion. The first element, the importance of self-awareness in emotional intelligence will be explored by the facilitator, potentially utilising real-life examples or activities to aid participant understanding. (PPT9 Slides 11-12) Next, strategies and techniques for effective self-management, including emotional regulation and impulse control, will be discussed by the facilitator. (PPT9 Slides 13-14) To continue Goleman's elements, the facilitator will examine the role of motivation in emotional intelligence, emphasising its influence on behaviour and perseverance. (PPT9 Slides 15-16)

	The facilitator will delve into empathy, highlighting its significance in understanding others' emotions and its role in effective communication and relationships. (PPT9 Slides 17-18) The facilitator will discuss the importance of managing relationships, focusing on conflict resolution and rapport building. (PPT9 Slides 19-20) The workshop will be summarised by the facilitator, highlighting the advantages of emotional intelligence in professional settings [Benefits of EQ in the Workplace] (PPT9 Slide 21) Participants will be encouraged to apply the concepts learned to enhance their workplace interactions and performance.
Activity Exercise 1 Role Play Exercise *Role play exercises are up to the discretion of facilitator	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to allow participants to demonstrate tenets of emotional intelligence. Instructions given by Facilitators: Divide participants into pairs. Assign one participant to take on the role of a domestic violence victim/survivor, and the other as the police officer conducting an interview. Instruct them to engage in a conversation where the victim/survivor expresses their feelings and experiences while the police officer offers empathy and conducts the interview bearing other significant elements of emotional intelligence in mind. Participants in their groups should present their scenario whilst their peers provide feedback.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	How do your own emotions affect your actions and decision-making in the course of your role as a police officer? How can you actively listen and empathise with others to build trust and improve relationships? What strategies can you employ to remain calm and composed in high-stress situations you may encounter?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Promote non-confrontational approaches to handling conflicts and tense situations in various life contexts. Emotional Intelligence can lead to more ethical and balanced decision-making, benefiting individuals and the broader community.

Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How do personal biases influence your interactions with others, and how can you address them? What methods can be used to de-escalate potentially confrontational situations in your personal and professional life?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Emotions play a crucial role in life and should be acknowledged and managed effectively. Empathetic communication is important to build trust within relationships and communities. Stress is manageable through self-regulation techniques and coping strategies. One's ability to recognise their own biases and work on mitigating their impact on decision-making and interactions with others will lead to a better work environment and subsequently law enforcement's role of interacting with others in distress.

MODULE ONE - PREPARATION OF TRAINERS

Unit 2 – Psychology of Self

TOPIC: Psychology of Self

SUB-TOPICS	Psychology of Self Effective Use of Self Active Listening Problem Solving and Decision Making Steps in the Problem-Solving Process
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Describe the concept 'psychology of self' Examine the importance of self in domestic violence Define the concept 'active listening' and the internal and external barriers to active listening.

	Identify examples of active listening techniques Ascertain the differences between listening and hearing. Discuss the term “Use of Self” and share how it can be used as a tool in the helping process. Define the terms “Problem Solving” and “Decision Making” and explain their differences.
Competencies:	Self-Awareness: The ability to recognize and understand one's emotions, thoughts, and values, fostering a deeper understanding of oneself. Self-reflection: Practising introspection to assess personal thoughts, behaviours, and beliefs. Adaptability: Adjusting behaviour and approach to suit different situations and individuals. Interpersonal skills: Developing effective communication, conflict resolution, and relationship-building abilities. Critical thinking: Analysing situations, identifying problems, and evaluating information objectively. Empathy and Understanding Others: Developing empathy towards others' experiences and perspectives, understanding the diversity of self-concepts across cultures and individuals. Resilience and Coping Strategies: Acquiring coping mechanisms and strategies to navigate challenges, setbacks, and changes in self-concept over time.
Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture presentation with powerpoint Guided Discussions Role Play Exercise
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled “PPT8 Psychology of Self” Projector

--	--	--

Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objective (PPT8 Slides 2-3) and explain the overall structure of the session. The session will begin with the facilitator discussing the definition of ‘psychology of self’ (PPT8 Slide 4) emphasising how one sees self integral role on how to react to others. The facilitator will then connect the understanding of psychology of self to its relevance in addressing domestic violence cases using (PPT8 Slide 5). The facilitator should also explore strategies for self-regulation in high-stress situations commonly encountered in domestic violence incidents. To continue the session, the facilitator will explore effective Use of Psychology of Self utilising (PPT8 Slides 6-9) The facilitator will begin exploring this topic through exploring with the participants a quotation from Wosket (2016) using (PPT8 Slide 6) and how to use psychology of self in an effective manner (PPT8 Slide 7) executing a role effectively without personal interference. The facilitator will continue to discuss the ways in which the use of self shows up by how we appear, talk and present ourselves - physical appearance and personal presence. (PPT8 Slide 8) The facilitator will continue with looking at what does Self consist of such as who we are?, what we know? and what can we do? (PPT8 Slide 9) The participants will then be guided into a discussion on active listening, starting with its definition (PPT8 Slide 10) and the characteristics of active listening (PPT8 Slides 11). The facilitator will utilise the acronym LISTEN to highlight the main characteristics: L - Look interested I - Inquire with questions S - Stay on target T - Test understanding E - Evaluate the message N - Neutralise your feelings Next, the facilitator will utilise (PPT8 Slide 12) to engage in a collaborative discussion on the difference between the concepts Listening and Hearing. It is important for the facilitator to note that Hearing is a physiological process thus it is the ability to perceive sound. Listening, on the other hand, is an active, conscious process and involves not just hearing the sounds but also interpreting and making sense of them. Thus, it is about focusing on what is being said, understanding the message, and giving attention and consideration to the speaker. To continue the session, the facilitator will then elaborate on Active Listening Techniques such as paraphrasing, building trust and verbal affirmations illustrated on (PPT8 Slide 13) and the examples of these active listening techniques mentioned on (PPT8 Slide 14). The facilitator will continue to explore examples of active listening techniques utilising (PPT8 Slides 14-16). The facilitator should attempt to show through use of these examples how they may relate to how individuals should deal with a domestic violence case. The facilitator will then take a close look at the external barriers to active listening (PPT8 Slides 17) and the internal barriers to active listening. (PPT8 Slides 18). The facilitator will then turn the attention of the participants to the definitions of the concepts of Problem Solving and Decision Making (PPT8 Slide 19). Further elaboration of this topic will be carried out next by the facilitator who will delve into a comparison of the two concepts Problem Solving and Decision Making. (PPT8 Slide 20). The facilitator will then review two versions of the process or cycle of Decision Making (PPT8 Slides 21-22) which will outline a detailed breakdown structured approach to decision-making for effective problem-solving. After reviewing both processes, a comparison may be discussed and examples utilised to apply these processes. To culminate the session, the facilitator will lead the participants in a role-play exercise - Activity Exercise 1,

Activity Exercise 1 Role Play Exercise	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to allow participants to practise the demonstration of self-awareness during interactions with victims/survivors of domestic violence. Instructions given by Facilitators:

	Divide the participants into pairs. Assign one participant to play the role of a distressed victim/survivor of domestic violence and the other participant plays the role of a responding police officer. Utilising the knowledge gained on the definition of psychology of self and characteristics of active listening. The facilitator should emphasise the importance of self-awareness and active listening in handling the situation calmly and effectively. The distressed victim/survivor should express emotions and behaviours representative of the situation, while the responding officer applies their training and communication skills to de-escalate the scenario. After the role-play scenarios, the facilitator should hold a debrief session to discuss participants' experiences and insights. Participants should be encouraged to share lessons learned and discuss strategies for further improvement. The facilitator should discuss stress management techniques, the impact of officer mindset and psychology of self on interactions, and strategies to maintain a calm demeanour in high-pressure scenarios.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	How did the responding police officers manage their own emotions and reactions? Did the officers demonstrate understanding of problem solving and decision-making techniques towards the distressed victim/survivor? What communication techniques were effective in de-escalating the situation?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Self-awareness is essential for effective policing, as it helps officers manage emotions and make informed decisions in domestic violence situations. Self-regulation enables officers to maintain composure, make rational decisions, and ensure victim/survivor safety during domestic violence incidents.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What are some personal biases and assumptions that officers might bring to these situations?

	How can self-reflection improve responses to victims? What role does empathy play in effective communication with victims? What techniques or strategies can help regulate emotions during challenging interactions? How can officers effectively communicate their support and willingness to help?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Messages: Understanding personal biases and triggers is essential for effective intervention. Awareness of one's emotions and reactions can prevent escalation and aid victims. Empathetic responses create a safe environment for victims/survivors to share their experiences. It fosters better understanding and aids in de-escalating tense situations. Managing stress allows for clearer thinking and better decision-making. Effective use of self is important in carrying out tasks where other's emotions may not be regulated.

MODULE ONE: PREPARATION OF TRAINERS

Unit 2 - Psychology of Self

TOPIC: Counselling vs. Mediation

SUB-TOPICS	Definitions of Counselling and Mediation Characteristics of Counselling Counselling Theories and Process Counselling Skills Mediation Model
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives:	Define key concepts such as counselling and mediation Develop an understanding of the impact of traumatic situations on victims/survivors. Identify survivor-centred approach and active listening skills in counselling and mediation communication.

	Ability to assess risk factors and safety needs and respond adequately. Provide emotional support to victims/survivors in crisis. Develop conflict resolution skills Learn about legal obligations and ethical considerations in domestic violence cases. Understand confidentiality and reporting requirements.
Competencies:	● Empathy and Compassion: Demonstrate the ability to empathise with victims/survivors and offer compassionate support. ● Cultural Sensitivity: Recognize and respect cultural differences in dealing with domestic violence cases. ● Communication Skills: Exhibit effective communication skills in counselling and mediation sessions. ● Conflict Resolution: Apply conflict resolution techniques to facilitate peaceful resolutions. ● Safety Planning: Assist victims/survivors in creating comprehensive safety plans tailored to their needs. ● Trauma-Informed Practice: Utilise trauma-informed practices in all aspects of counselling and mediation. ● Ethical Practice: Adhere to ethical guidelines, maintaining confidentiality and ensuring the safety of survivors.
Training Techniques:	Lecture Presentation with powerpoint Scenarios/Case Studies Exercises Role Play Exercise Guided Discussions

Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The Facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the learning objectives for this topic and explain how achieving these objectives will benefit the participants in their roles as domestic violence trainers. To begin the lecture presentation, the facilitator will initiate a guided discussion on the definition and importance of counselling (PPT10 Slides 2-6) This discussion will be followed by an exploration into the characteristics of counselling (PPT10 Slides 7-9) The participants are encouraged to share their experiences and insights related to receiving or conducting any mediation and counselling activities. The session will continue with a discussion of various types of Counselling theories such as Psychoanalytic; Adlerian; Existential; Person Centred; Gestalt and Reality. (PPT10 - Slides 10-11) The facilitator will then explore the steps in the Counselling process (PPT10 Slides 12) The lecture presentation will be paused to conduct the first group activity - Activity Exercise 1 - Role Play Exercise. After the activity debrief and reflection, the lecture presentation will continue with an exploration into skills needed for counselling. (PPT10 Slide 13) The facilitator will then lead the discussion towards understanding what is Mediation and the role of the mediator (PPT10 Slides 14-15) This will group into looking at the Mediation Model. (PPT10 Slides 16-19) The facilitator will clearly explain to the participants that although they have been exposed to both counselling and mediation, in dealing with cases of domestic violence, the process of counselling is preferred to mediation when dealing with victims/survivors of domestic violence. The session will culminate with a revision on the key topics of the session and the participants thanks for their active participation and contributions.
Activity Exercise 1 Role Play Exercise	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this role play exercise is to introduce the participants to the important aspects of carrying out counselling sessions.

	Instructions given by Facilitators: Divide the class into pairs or small groups. Provide scenarios or victim/survivor profiles for each group to work with. Encourage students to conduct counselling sessions, focusing on active listening, empathy, and trauma-informed care. Roles will be assigned to each group either of the victim/survivor, Counsellor and Observer. Each group will conduct a role-play counselling/mediation session where the Counsellor interacts with the victim/survivor, addressing her emotional needs and helping her begin the healing process. The Observer should take notes on effective communication and counselling techniques. After the role-play, have each group discuss what went well and what could be improved in the counselling or mediation session. Emphasise the importance of empathy and active listening.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	Why is counselling preferred as a solution most suitable for the scenario presented? What are the key steps that should be taken to ensure confidentiality of sessions? What specific skills or competencies should a mediator or counsellor possess?
Take-Away Point from Exercise:	Encourage a non-judgmental and supportive attitude when working with victims/survivors, as they may have complex emotions, cultural values and experiences.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How can challenges with confidentiality and informed consent be dealt with? What strategies can you use to minimise retraumatization during counselling? How would you carry out safety planning to ensure the wellbeing of the victim/survivor?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways:

--	--	--

	The concept of survivor-centred care and its application in domestic violence cases is important in counselling and mediation processes. The need to tailor counselling and mediation approaches to the unique needs and goals of each victim/survivor is extremely important to the success of the process. It is important to establish and respect healthy boundaries in all interactions and obtain informed consent for any interventions. Victims/Survivors' legal rights and available resources, such as protection orders and legal services available.

Unit 3 - Gender-Based Violence

- Facilitator Guideline - Introduction to Gender-Based Violence (GBV)

MODULE TWO: FUNDAMENTAL CONCEPTS RELATED TO GENDER AND GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE

Unit 3 – Gender-Based Violence

TOPIC: Gender-Based Violence

SUB-TOPICS	• Sex vs Gender • Gender Socialisation and domains • Gender based Violence (GBV): definition, root causes and contributing factors • Types and Forms of Gender-Based Violence • Prevalence of GBV globally, regionally and in Jamaica. Important Facts • Consequences of GBV for the victim/survivor, family and broader society • GBV in emergencies
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	• Standardise the knowledge of the concepts of sex as a biological condition and gender as a social construction. • Understand the definition, types and forms of Gender-Based Violence (GBV) • Distinguish between the root causes and the contributing factors of

	GBV. • Understand the domains of gender power relations and gender socialisation and their impact on GBV. Analyse global and regional prevalence data on GBV to comprehend its scope and impact, understanding that this data is the tip of the iceberg.. • Explore how GBV intersects with various identities (race, class, sexuality) and understand its compounded impact. • Understand how humanitarian crises, such as natural disasters and COVID-19, can contribute to increasing the vulnerability to GBV and add obstacles to the access to services for survivors.
Competencies:	• Knowledge of GBV terminology and types of GBV. • Ability to recognize the physical, emotional, and behavioural indicators of GBV • Understanding the psychological, social, and economic consequences of domestic violence. • Critical Analysis: Participants will critically evaluate the factors that contribute to the perpetuation of gender-based violence, fostering a deeper understanding of its complexities. • Gender-Inclusive Promotion: Participants will demonstrate respect for all gender identities when discussing and addressing gender-based violence. Uniformed correct use of the terms sex and gender. • Have a clear understanding of how gender stereotypes and the domains of gender relations are based on unbalanced gender power relations that are at the basis of GBV. • Knowledge of gender-based violence (GBV): Learn the terminology and types and forms of gender-based violence (GBV). • Data Analysis: Ability to interpret and critically analyse prevalence data from global and regional sources. • Intersectional Perspective: Ability to recognize and appreciate the intersectionality of factors contributing to GBV. • Communication Skills: Effectively communicate the complexities of GBV and its impact on health and socioeconomics. • Critical Thinking: Develop critical thinking skills to analyse the relationship between GBV and humanitarian crisis, including COVID-19 pandemic and natural disasters.

Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training agenda for the session (PPT11 - Slide 2) The facilitator will then instruct the participants to engage in Voting with your feet (PPT11 Slide 3) - Activity Exercise 1 After Activity Exercise 1, the facilitator will take 15 minutes to give participants a Pretest (PPT11 Slide 4) which can be found at https://app.sli.do/event/2jTHERvWoap6W5mmT2YB9W The facilitator will then ask the participants to give their insight in relation to their perceived definition of the concepts sex and gender. The facilitator will then explore the difference between sex vs gender (PPT11 Slide 5). The facilitator along with the participants will standardise the knowledge of the concepts of sex as a biological condition and gender as a social construction and discuss the implication in terms of power dynamics. To continue the session, participants will be asked to engage in a Reflection activity 30'. (Use of instructional materials CS1a and CS1b) whilst bearing in mind the definitions of sex and gender. (PPT11 Slide 6). Participants will be asked to take two minutes to think about an experience lived as a child or teenager in which they were treated differently because they were girls or boys. See Activity Exercise 2. At the end of that activity, the facilitator will introduce a poll to knowledge on Sex or Gender for the participants to complete. (PPT11 Slide 7) The poll can be found at https://app.sli.do/event/5GiWuJhkwTrpp4pbopZL58 After the completion of the poll, the facilitator will focus attention on the concepts of Sex and Gender not being interchangeable. (PPT11 Slide 8) The facilitator will ask the participants to redefine sex and gender based on what they have learnt so far. The facilitator will then take key points from their answers to strengthen their knowledge reminding them that proper terminology is important. It should be highlighted that the terms sex and gender are not synonymous and cannot be interchanged. The facilitator will inform the participants that: "The male and female sexes are universal. Sex is assigned to a person from birth based on a biological condition determined by chromosomes and genitalia. The union between: Sperm (X) + ovum (X) = XX = female baby (female). The union between: Sperm (Y) + ovule (X) = XY = male baby (male). (There are also intersex people, that is, people who have both characteristics)

	“Gender refers to the set of culturally defined economic, social and political roles. It includes responsibilities, rights and obligations associated with being a man and a woman by society. Highlight the power relations between men and women, boys and girls. Gender, unlike sex, is a social construction, it changes according to time and places, cultures. Gender expression refers to how a person chooses to present her gender to the world, it is reflected in the choice of how to dress, speak, behave, interests ... a person can express themselves as feminine, masculine or androgynous. if needed” The facilitator will then recap of the differences between Sex and Gender (PPT11 Slide 9) with the emphasis on sex being a biological concept and gender being a cultural concept. The facilitator will inform the participants that: “Some examples of characteristics related to sex: (i) Female people: they generally have a menstrual cycle; they produce milk for breastfeeding; ii) Male persons: they have testicles, ejaculation, and generally longer bones.” This will be followed by a Group Reflection exercise (Out of the box 30’), which will be instructed by the facilitator. The group reflection exercise will look at ‘Gender stereotypes related to interpersonal relationships and sexuality. Easy to exit the box?’ Activity Exercise 3 (PPT11 Slide 10) The exercise should be done in two phases of 15 minutes each. The first phase, General (15’), using a flipchart, the facilitator and the participants will discuss the different roles, responsibilities, women and men, girls and boys have in the society and also discuss the value of these and the implications on power. For the second phase, Sexuality (15’), the facilitator will delve into a discussion with the participants on: ● What are the general expectations about the sexuality of adult, young and adolescent women? ● What are the general expectations about sexuality of adult, young, and adolescent men? It should be noted to the participants that: “SOME GENDER STEREOTYPES ABOUT MALE SEXUALITY Male sexuality is totally genitalized, sexual practices are usually considered limited to the act of penetrating and ejaculating.

	Men sexual desire is considered uncontrollable “instinct” Men are who should take the initiative. The early initiation of sexual relations is promoted (so they have few limitations to have access to information about bodies and reproductive processes) – They are valued if they have more partners (manliness) – They feel a duty to comply with social expectations of demonstrating constantly their manhood in front of everyone – To demonstrate their manhood they do not miss opportunities – Distinguish between “making love” with a fixed partner and “having sex” with other women Seeking health care or talking about health is considered to weaken the idea strong man SOME GENDER STEREOTYPES ABOUT FEMALE SEXUALITY - Women, on the other hand, should be sexually passive (she should not conquer, she should allow herself to be conquered and possessed; she should not show herself to be an expert, she should not show sexual desire, if she does, her integrity is suspect) - Her sexuality it is related to reproduction (maternity) - Young women are valued for their purity (so they have limitations regarding having access to information about bodies and reproductive processes) - Biassed and discriminatory attitudes on the part of health personnel, especially for young women, that limits their access and use of sexual and reproductive health services - Limited power in negotiating the use of condoms (this is related to the stereotypes mentioned so far, requesting to use it can lead to violent reactions from the partner)” After the activity, the facilitator will explore the domains of the gender relations through a chart on (PPT11 Slide 11). The facilitator will impart to the participants that: “Specific “aspects” or “domains” of social and cultural relations include: - practices, roles, and participation; (in the family, in the community life, etc.) - knowledge, beliefs, and perceptions (many of which are normative, that is, they provide norms for what is appropriate behaviour for women and men); - access to assets, resources, services - legal rights and status; and (related to all of these) power.” “In a patriarchal society, taken together, these different relations in these domains shape the different levels of power to which women and girls and men and boys may have access in a given context.

	Power is thus in many ways a cross-cutting domain, but we also list it separately to ensure that it is considered concretely as well. Some types of behaviour may not be legally recognized as forms of violence (for example, marital rape), nonetheless they are still forms of violence with important implications for women's health and health-care needs, whether or not there is legal redress. Emphasise: Violence again" The facilitator will then explore gender socialisation, its definition and key questions for critical thinking. (PPT11 Slide 12) The facilitator will read aloud an official definition from UNICEF and garner the thoughts of the participants. Definition: "process by which individuals develop, refine and learn to 'do' gender through internalising gender norms and roles as they interact with key agents of socialisation, such as their family, social networks and other social institutions." UNICEF, Innocenti Research Brief "Gender Socialization during Adolescence in Low- and Middle-income Countries. Conceptualization, influences and outcomes" The facilitator will then invite the participants' feedback from the following questions: How are parents and caregivers treating baby boys and baby girls differently? How are boys and girls socialised differently in their culture? ○ Internalisation and acting out of gender norms/gender stereotypes ○ Gender socialisation begins at birth, intensifies during adolescence and contributes to gender inequalities in education, employment, income, empowerment, and other significant outcomes of well-being during adolescence and later in life Which are some agents of socialisation? The facilitator will inform the participants that: • "In early childhood, parents and caregivers may dress male and female children in different colours or give them different toys to play with • comment on the appearance of little girls ("You are so pretty; "What a nice dress you have"), while they are more likely to point out the activities and abilities of boys ("You run so fast"; "You are so strong"). • "agents of socialisation influenced by factors such as the socio-economic conditions of a country, gendered and political structures, social and cultural norms, the global media, and their own local communities and

	networks.” Next, the facilitator will examine the process and agents of socialisation (PPT 11 Slide 13). Using a chart, the facilitator will show the participants the Multilevel framework of influences impacting gender socialisation processes during adolescence. The facilitator will inform the participants: “Gender socialisation begins at birth, intensifies during adolescence and contributes to gender inequalities in education, employment, income, empowerment, and other significant outcomes of well-being during adolescence and later in life.” (UNICEF Innocenti research) The facilitator will then move to Section II - Gender-Based Violence. The facilitator will begin this section with a Poll where the participants will have 30 seconds to answer. (PPT 11 Slide 14) The poll can be found at https://www.menti.com/al8ji12i6jhp Please only select those statements that you agree with: 1. Gender Based Violence is about rape and sexual violence (answer: false) 2. GBV can be perpetrated against boys and men (answer: true) 3. A sex worker can be raped (answer: true) 4. Intimate partner violence is the result of poverty and lack of education (answer: false) 5. If a woman wears clothes that are provocative for men, it's her fault that she gets harassed on the Street 6. The consequences of GBV are the same for all survivors of GBV The facilitator will then show the correct answers on the screen and utilise this as a way to introduce the concept of gender-based violence. Next, the facilitator will go through definitions of gender-based violence with the participants. (PPT 11 Slide 15) “This definition has been agreed by the interagency standing committee in 2005. For their gender identity or expression, there is violence against women, adolescents, LGBTIQ+, people that do not respond to the heterosexual gender expectations, sex workers for example....

	‘Violence against women and girls in Jamaica is driven by an intersection of cultural, economic, social and political factors that undermine women’s position in Jamaican society and reinforce notions of female subordination and male domination’ Source: Women’s health survey, 2016, p. 14 ‘Entrenched notions of male and female roles and entitlements in society undergird this violence’ Source: Women’s health survey, 2016, p. 19” The facilitator will ask the participants to prompt which are the root causes of gender-based violence (GBV) from their perspective. The facilitator will ask the participants if they can identify root causes of GBV. The facilitator will then explore the GBV root causes and contributing factors and the results or effects of GBV (PPT11 Slide 16) This will be supported by the visual image of a tree (PPT11 Slide 17) This labelled tree is one way that can explain GBV, its root causes, contributing factors and consequences can be effectively and graphically explained. The facilitator should inform the participants that: There are 5 root causes of GBV: 1. the most important root causes of GBV are power imbalance/abuse of power (these are linked to) 2. gender inequalities. 3. disregard for human rights, 4. Culture and traditions, 5. Social norms, which are very context-specific. 2. Now, some of you have mentioned other factors that you may consider as root causes, but we refer to those as contributing factors to GBV. Think of it like the rain – which helps the tree grow stronger and faster. These factors contribute to GBV, such as poverty..... war/conflict, etc 3. Ok, now that we have established this, I would like you to write on the chat box or on paper the types of GBV that you have dealt with in your work/daily life – 30 seconds. Thank you. We usually group different types of GBV in 4 categories, and on this tree, we consider them as the core of the tree, these are composed of different forms of violence that I see have been mentioned here. - The first one is psychological violence, and forms of PV can be for example intimidation, emotional abuse.... -Then we have sexual violence, and a form of this violence can be for example, rape, sexual harassment.... -The third type of GBV is economical/financial violence, which refers to instances when for example women and girls are not allowed to attend school and therefore miss out on labour opportunities which will contribute to them

	being independent and empowered enough to leave an abusive relationship. -Finally, we have physical violence, clearly also which is quite based on the examples you provide here, for example, intimate partner violence, where the husband beats the wife. It is important to remember that these four types of violence are oftentimes interlinked with each other, and usually happen simultaneously, feeding on each other. 4. Finally, representing the branches and leaves of the tree, we have the consequences of GBV. Which are too many to even mention here, but these are some of them: death..... Now that we have established this, it is important to remember that perpetrators chose violence in order to maintain power and control over the survivors. And that although men and boys also suffer from GBV, women and girls and LGBTQI communities are disproportionately affected by it – this is why they are UNFPA's main focus. The facilitator will prompt the participants to participate in discovering the types of gender-based violence. The facilitator will emphasize that “some types of behaviour may not be legally recognized as forms of violence (for example, marital rape), nonetheless they are still forms of violence with important implications for women's health and health-care needs, whether or not there is legal redress. N.B. Violence against women is an expression of unequal power or a form of abuse of power” Scenarios - (PPT11 Slide 19) 5' The facilitator will direct scenarios with the participants. The facilitator will take the participants on an exploration of forms of gender-based violence (GBV) and related concepts found in (PPT11 Slides 20-21) The main types to be listed and explored include “domestic violence intimate partner violence, sexual violence by someone other than a husband or partner; femicide; forced and early marriage; human trafficking; female genital mutilation; acid-throwing and honour killings” The facilitator will invite reflection and discussion by asking if there are other examples of violence not listed, what forms of abuse do trainees think are most common in their setting, and what forms are recognized by their legal framework. The facilitator will emphasise that it is important to note that “Violence by an intimate partner – a husband, ex-husband, boyfriend, ex-boyfriend or partner – including physical, sexual and psychological violence. In some settings this is known as domestic violence. However, domestic violence also includes violence

	by other family members.” Next, the facilitator will delve into gender-based violence (GBV) and the family (PPT11 Slides 22) and the 15 facts about the relationship of both concepts. (PPT11 Slides 23-24) The facilitator will culminate the session, the video The order of Things (Activity Exercise 5) will be played for reflection and discussion of participants. The movie for on elements unearthed in the lesson thus far. The video with English Subtitles accessible through this link: https://vimeo.com/62415430 Next, the facilitator will introduce the next activity - Mary and John (Activity Exercise 4) on (PPT11 Slide 26) utilising the instructions to be found in the RG2 - Mary and John document Mary and John and the socio- ecological model (PPT11 Slide 27) - 5’ which features the diagram taken from https://www.acha.org/HealthyCampus/Implement/Ecological_Model/HealthyCampus/Ecological_Model.aspx?hkey=f5defc87-662e-4373-8402-baf78d569c78 The model aims to show an understanding of elements to understanding violence and a plan to prevent and respond towards elimination. Suggested separation of content in sessions here. (PPT11 Slide 28) Facilitators are invited to recap the previous session before delving into the rest of the content. (PPT11 Slide 29) The facilitator will continue the session by introducing the participants to the Activity Exercise 6 - Voting with your feet (PPT11 Slide 30) The participants will then transition to Activity Exercise 7 which is a

	Video about consent . Participants will be asked to reflect and make connections where necessary; this video is important to state that sexual activity cannot happen without explicit volunteer consent by both parties, and that nothing excuses sexual abuse. Video - Tea Consent - https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oQbei5JGiT8 (PPT11 Slide 31) The facilitator will continue the lesson by looking at global prevalence of Violence against Women (VAW) (PPT11 Slide 32-33) In exploring the data, the facilitator will ensure that clarification is made on data presented as only being the ‘tip of the iceberg’ and that “The cases are underreported to the service providers, for fear, not trust in the system, normalisation, fear of stigmatisation, etc. Also during the surveys in which data is collected at household level, like the Jamaican Women’s health survey 2016, not all women want to speak with a stranger about ‘private’ issues, and they may be in an environment/with people they do not feel comfortable and safe to do so, for example.” Having time available, in order to increase the intake of the information, the data can be presented using a participatory methodology: - Asking the participants to guess the data (putting a sweet as a price is also an idea) and then showing the correct answer using transitions in powerpoint. The facilitator will continue with an exploration into more statistical data, highlighting specific data on women. The exploration will continue with a global and regional data map estimates of women’s experience of violence (PPT11 Slide 34) (In case it is possible to print and distribute as a handout “Violence Against Women: Global Picture Health Response for estimates for your region”. - This map shows numbers that come from population-level data from all over the world that was compiled by WHO and published in 2013. In case the printing is not possible, the map can be analysed collaboratively while projected in the screen) The facilitator will emphasise to the participants that “globally, data show that 30% of women – nearly 1 in every 3 women – have experienced physical or sexual violence by an intimate partner in their lifetime. This varies somewhat by WHO region. This highest prevalence estimates are for WHO South-East Asia Region and WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region. However, even for the high-income countries of North America, Western Europe, Australia and New Zealand, the estimate is still high at over 23%. In most populations intimate partners are the primary perpetrators of violence against women. While it might be difficult for us to think of partners as perpetrators, it is important to remember that these individuals often pose the greatest risk to women’s safety.”

	The session will continue with (PPT11 Slide 32) exploring data of non-partner sexual violence. The facilitator will inform the participants that “Sexual violence by someone other than a partner is less common, and there are far fewer survey data available on non-partner sexual violence. However, estimates are 7% for non-partner sexual violence globally. In high-income countries (HIC) the estimate is just above 12% and in Africa close to 12%.” The potential of under-reporting should be highlighted. Data about Prevalence of gender-based violence by age (PPT11 Slide 33) will be explored next by the facilitator. The facilitator will inform the participants that “Violence starts early in women’s lives. By ages 15-19, already 30% of girls have experienced intimate partner violence. Prevention and response are particularly crucial for adolescents because they have specific vulnerabilities related to age, autonomy, not having reached full legal capacity to access services in some settings, etc. While some of this may be dating violence, in many settings where child marriages are highly prevalent, intimate partner violence for adolescent girls may be in the context of being child brides. It has been reported that some young women are encouraged by their family or parents to engage in relationships with men who can provide financial support to the family (Wood, Hutchinson, Kahwa, Hewitt & Waldron, 2011) Almost half the females aged 15 to 24 who are sexually active were coerced into having sex at the time of their first sexual encounter. (Serbanescu, Ruiz and Suchdev, 2010).” The facilitator will explore (PPT11 Slide 36) next looking at Lifetime prevalence rates for some caribbean countries -https://caribbeanwomencount.unwomen.org/index.html To continue the session, the facilitator will then turn their attention to the statistics of Jamaica (PPT11 Slide 37), using the Women’s health survey https://caribbeanwomencount.unwomen.org/countries.html?country=2. To do so the facilitator will use the slide with transitions, showing the title of the statistic without showing the data, and asking the participants to guess the data, trying to figure out the dimension of the issue in their country (small prizes like candies can be used). - Ask the prevalence of women in Jamaica who experienced intimate partner physical and sexual violence in their lifetime: - 27.8% that is more than 1 in every 4 (the facilitator can also ask the number of women in the room, and divide it by 4 thus making an estimation of how many could have been experiencing IPV or sexual violence in their lifetime); this exercise is important for the participants to have a visual image of the problem and it will remain more easily impressed in their mind). - The prevalence of women who has experienced physical violence alone at the hands of a male partner: - 25.2% (that is 1 of every 4 women) - Percentage of women who agreed that it was justified for a man to beat his wife if she neglects the children: - 9% The following data are very important for the JCF and may be used to stimulate the discussion of the reason for this low numbers reported in 2016: - Percentage of women who did not seek help: - 63% - Percentage of women who seek help from the police - 32.1% but only 7.8% received support (20% had reported) In exploring the IPV Prevalence Data Women’s Health Survey 2016 (PPT11 Slide 39), the facilitator will inform the participants that “The data are considered a sub-estimation, since it is not always easy for the women to speak about their situations of violence also for fear.” The facilitator will continue looking at important data (PPT11 Slide 40) showing the main reasons women sought help for physical and sexual violence. The facilitator will highlight that the women’s willingness to endure the abusive situation and being afraid of greater violence were the main reasons no longer. The facilitator will also highlight that it is imperative to analyse data on the killings of women in Jamaica (PPT11 Slide 41) and cases of sexual assault, the slide (PPT11 Slide 42) presents is a chart showing data on different forms of sexual offences reported to the police (JCF) from 2014-2018, being sex with minors the most report every year with the exception of 2016. The facilitator will ensure that the participants are aware that: “Rape being the most egregious. In 2018 the largest portion of cases occurred in St. Catherine (95) and St. Andrew (74). Also as of 2016, 7.7 % of Jamaican women have experienced sexual violence at the hands of a male partner. This includes forced sexual activity which, depending on the circumstances of the case, may or may not fall within statutory definitions of a sexual offence. The prevalence rate for this type of sexual violence is higher among girls aged 15-24 (9.6%) and appears more likely to occur if the victim began her first cohabiting relationship before the age of 18 or if during childhood she witnessed or was

	subjected to domestic violence.” [Source: MOH Protocols and Standards Operating Procedures for the treatment of victims of sexual assault in health facilities - June 2020] Facilitators may provide additional national or sub-national prevalence data for the country which may be available through Demographic and Health Surveys (DHS) or other, equivalent national surveys on VAW in order to explain the figures and the forms of violence that are most common. After the discussion and analysis of data, the facilitator will delve into a discussion about GBV and intersectionality (PPT11 Slide 43). The facilitator must know the concept/definition of intersectionality: “The theory that various forms of discrimination centred on race, gender, class, disability, sexuality, and other forms of identity, do not work independently but interact to produce particularised forms of social oppression. As such, oppression is the result of intersecting forms of exclusionary practices. It is thus suggested that the study of identity-based discrimination needs to identify and take account of these intersectionalities.” The facilitator will break the session here to allow the participants to engage in Myths and Facts, the Activity Exercise 8 (PPT11 Slide 44). The session will continue with looking at pathways and health effects of Intimate Partner Violence in Jamaica (PPT11 Slide 42-43). The facilitator will advise the participants that “Violence against women has both physical (including sexual and reproductive health) and mental health consequences. There are both fatal and nonfatal outcomes. Also, there are short-term and long-term outcomes. Further, these health outcomes vary by population and setting.” The facilitator will emphasise the WHO global estimates, published in 2013 and draw on systematic reviews of published studies. The facilitator will read the numbers/figures that show the associations with health consequences one by one and explain the following: “The pathways by which intimate partner violence affects women’s health include physical trauma (click to reveal image), which results in injuries, and also psychological trauma, which is linked to depression (click to reveal image), post-traumatic stress syndrome (PTSD), alcohol and substance use disorders (click to reveal image), and which also contributes to noncommunicable diseases and to somatoform symptoms. And to fear and subjection to control that limits sexual and reproductive autonomy and health-care seeking, which in turn can lead to low-birth weight babies (click to reveal image), preterm births, lack of contraceptive use, unsafe sex, induced abortions (click to reveal image), STIs

	and HIV (click to reveal image). Violence against women also leads to deaths – femicides: 38% (some estimates suggest 50%) of murders/homicides of women are by their intimate partners (in comparison with 6% of murders of men) (click to reveal image). Also, women subjected to intimate partner violence are more likely to attempt suicide (click to reveal last image). “ Here reflections will be invited by asking the participants if there are any surprises in terms of the health outcomes presented, and whether and what kind of health symptoms and conditions are seen by the participants in their clinical. To continue the session the facilitator will transition to discussing Inter-generational health & socio-economic consequences (PPT11 Slide 47). The facilitator will tell the participants that: “Beyond the health consequences on the woman, there are also consequences for children and families and socio-economic consequences for her and her family and for communities and societies.” The facilitator will proceed to read the consequences from the slide. (PPT11 Slide 47), and highlight the inter-generational consequence: “Children exposed to violence or subjected to violence themselves are more likely to perpetrate or experience violence. Thus, it is important for health-care providers to see if the children who accompany women subjected to violence show signs or symptoms. Similarly, children’s signs and symptoms may be a cue to also assess whether their mothers are experiencing IPV.” The facilitator will transition to exploring COVID -19 and gender-based violence (GBV) (PPT11 Slide 48). The facilitator will first ask the participants to respond to the question “Are Covid-19 and other emergencies a contributing factor to gender-based violence (GBV)?” to explain why? The facilitator will then move to the following slide (PPT11 Slide 49) to discuss some of the COVID-19 related contributing factors mentioned. The facilitator will inform the participants that “Violence against Women has been named as the “shadow pandemic” of COVID-19”, the facilitator will ask the participants how they envision the scenario in cases of natural emergencies and other humanitarian crises, considering similarities to and differences from COVID-19. To culminate the lesson, the facilitator will recap the training season and allow the participants to evaluate the training.
Activity Exercise 1:	Learning Objective for Exercise:

(Game) Voting with your feet	The objective of this exercise is to allow the participants to reflect critically on our perceptions and beliefs that affect the care we provide to survivors. Instructions given by Facilitators: This exercise titled “Voting with your feet” is taken by WHO. (2021). - Caring for women subjected to violence: A WHO training curriculum for health care providers. https://cdn.who.int/media/docs/default-source/hrp/vaw/exercises-resources.pdf?sfvrsn=f52c3441_12 Instructions to the Facilitators: (PPT11 Slide 27) Find a space where participants can easily move around. ■ If the group is too big, split into two or three groups and conduct the exercise in 2–3 different spaces (for example, a breakaway room or different ends of the room). ■ Ask the participants in each group to stand in the middle of the room in a straight line. ■ Place a sign (either on flip charts or pieces of paper in large font) with “Agree” written on one side of the space and on the opposite side a sign with “Disagree” on it. ■ Read out loud one of the statements listed in the facilitator resource. ■ Ask participants to respond by moving towards one of the signs – either agree or disagree – depending on whether they agree or disagree with the statement. ■ Ask the participants to choose how close to the sign they stand based on how strongly they agree or disagree with the statement. ■ After each statement, facilitate a discussion about why people chose the places they took. This will help them to dig deeper into their underlying belief systems. ■ Ask each side to explain its point of view to the other side. Allow some time for debate. ■ After a short debate, ask if anyone would like to change position. ■ Repeat this by reading 4–5 more statements, depending on how much time is available. Participants will be asked to stand in one line. The facilitator will read a list of statements (based on the time, they can be chosen among those proposed below); the trainees will be asked to step to the right of the line if they agree or to the left, if they disagree with the statement. The Statements:

	1. Men should have more right to a job than women 2. Men make better business executives than women do 3. Men need sex more than women. 4. Adolescent mothers are at all affected by adult persons. 5. Among males it is considered normal that men at a certain point of their life have multiple partners.
Activity Exercise 2 Reflection Activity	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to allow participants to self-reflect on experiences where social expectations according to sex and gender influenced them as children/teenagers. Participants will have the opportunity to reflect on their own experiences, potentially uncovering instances where they were treated differently based on their gender during their formative years The facilitator will ask participants to take two minutes to think about a lived experience as a child or teenager in which they were treated differently because they were girls or boys. Participants will be asked to present their experience. These presentations will be followed by a discussion on which are the social expectations for girls and boys, women and girls. The discussion will be guided to identify which are gender constructions.
Activity Exercise 3 Group Reflection Activity Out of the box (30')	Learning Objectives of Exercise: Gender stereotypes - to ascertain the level of difficulty one may experience in letting go of specific gender stereotypes. Instructions given by Facilitators: Group Reflection - Gender stereotypes related to interpersonal relationships and sexuality. Easy to exit the box? (PPT11 Slide 10) 1st phase general – using a flipchart (15') Discuss about the different roles, responsibilities, women and men, girls and boys have in society. Discuss the value of these and the implications on power.

	2nd phase – sexuality (15’) What are the general expectations about the sexuality of adult, young and adolescent women? What are the general expectations about sexuality of adult, young, and adolescent men?
Activity Exercise 4 Mary and John Role Play Exercise	Learning Objectives of Exercise: (PPT11 Slide 26) This game has been adapted to the Jamaican context and focused on GBV and police by Elga Salvador from a tool called - “The circle of Influence”, used while working for WI-HER. - Blanketed by Blame Character cards, present in WHO. 2019. Caring for women subject to violence: a WHO curriculum for training health care providers. (See RG2 - Mary and John) Instructions given by Facilitators Print the character’s statements and stick them one per each side of a card. Place a couple of trainees, preferably a female and a male, in two chairs and give them the cards #1 Mary and #2 John respectively. Place the rest of the participants in a spiral shape starting after John, offering them the cards in the numerical order. Ask Mary to start and the other to continue reading only the first face of the card, where the scenario is numbered with one (in black). When everyone is done reading, ask Mary how she feels, ask the same to John. Then ask the last person of the spiral to read the card on the other side and the person close to him./her to continue until reaching Mary. When everyone is done reading, ask Mary how she feels, ask the same to John, ask the participants their impression and takeaways from the exercise.
Activity Exercise 5 The Order of Things (Video Clip)	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of allowing participants to watch the video “The Order of Things” is to engage them in a discussion on the problem of gender-based violence and the courage of the victim/survivor.

	Instructions given by Facilitators The facilitator will play the Video Clip - “The Order of Things” (El orden de las cosas) - Video with English Subtitles accessible through this link: https://vimeo.com/62415430 (A short film by the Alenda brothers). The participants will be told to reflect on the points highlighted in relation to women experiencing gender-based violence.
Activity Exercise 6: (Game) Voting with your feet	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to allow the participants to reflect critically on our perceptions and beliefs that affect the care we provide to survivors. The facilitator will read a list of statements (based on the time, they can be chosen among those proposed below); the trainees will be asked to step to the right of the line if they agree or to the left, if they disagree with the statement. This exercise titled “Voting with your feet” is taken by WHO. 2021. Caring for women subjected to violence: A WHO training curriculum for health care providers. https://cdn.who.int/media/docs/default-source/hrp/vaw/exercises-resources.pdf?sfvrsn=f52c3441_12 This exercise may be adapted with additional quotes and with a Jamaican context. The Statements: 1. Women are just as violent as men in relationships. 2. Survivors of sexual violence may have provoked the abuse through their inappropriate behaviour (revealing clothing, dating, getting drunk, flirting, ...) 3. A woman can say “no” if she does not want to have sex with her husband 4. A sex worker cannot be raped. 5. Men who have sex with men do not experience gender-based violence. Note: This exercise can be intensely personal and uncomfortable for some participants. If you hear discomfort expressed, intersperse the statements on violence against women with those that are under the miscellaneous category to create a non threatening atmosphere. This exercise can also result in some participants feeling isolated if their values do not align with those of other group members, or it can create feelings of negativity towards their peers. Encourage participants to maintain a non-judgemental attitude towards beliefs that are not aligned with theirs or with those of the majority of the participants. These are complicated, emotional issues, and some participants may react strongly to the statement and others’ views. Remind them that everyone brings his or her own personal perspective to this exercise and that they need to be respectful of each other.
Activity Exercise 6	After the exercise is complete, facilitate a group discussion using the (Game) Voting with your feet Guiding Questions (After the Exercise)	following questions as a starting point: ■ How did it feel to confront values that you do not share? ■ What did you learn from this experience? ■ Did you change your opinion about any of the issues? ■ Encourage debate within the group and be ready to spend some time discussing the issues that arise. This exercise titled “Voting with your feet” is taken by WHO. 2021. Caring for women subjected to violence: A WHO training curriculum for health care providers. https://cdn.who.int/media/docs/default-source/hrp/vaw/exercises-resources.pdf?sfvrsn=f52c3441_12

Take-Away Points from Exercise: (Game) Voting with your feet	Points for the facilitator to emphasise (Activity Exercise 6): This exercise titled “Voting with your feet” is taken by WHO. 2021. Caring for women subjected to violence: A WHO training curriculum for health care providers. https://cdn.who.int/media/docs/default-source/hrp/vaw/exercises-resources.pdf?sfvrsn=f52c3441_12 The purpose of this exercise is to reflect on how our personal beliefs about violence against women and values might affect the care that we as health-care providers offer to survivors. ■ Our beliefs and attitudes often reflect the norms and values of the societies we live in. It is important to reflect on these norms and whether they might harm survivors. We must challenge them in our interactions with survivors and as role models to our patients and communities. ■ Women subjected to violence are often acutely aware and can sense when people have negative beliefs and opinions about them. If we are aware of our negative beliefs, we can better avoid communicating them to survivors of violence. ■ Changing mindsets takes time. However, it is possible to change our beliefs and attitudes, and it is healthy to examine and adjust them if necessary. 1. The few population-based studies that have examined women’s perpetration of violence have found that the level of violence experienced by men at the hands of their female partners is much lower than violence experienced by women at the hands of their male partners. The violence perpetrated by women is less likely to result in physical injuries, and often the violence is in response to violence perpetrated by the men. Violence by men against women is also more likely to include sexual violence.

	2. There is never any excuse or justification for rape or any type of violence. Women who are abused should never be blamed or told that it is their fault. 3. Every woman has the right to bodily integrity and the right to refuse sex. In many settings, however, gender norms socialise women and men into believing that once you are married, the man is entitled to have sex with his wife whenever he wants. In fact, in many countries, forced sex with your spouse is not considered to be rape. However, women always have the right to control their own bodies and sexuality, and this means that they can say “no” to sex with their husbands. 4. The fact that a person sells sex for a living does not mean that she/he is always ready and willing to have sex. Rape is the act of forcing someone to have sex without their consent. Sex workers are often forced to have sex because of the stigma that they are always available for sex. Even clients and potential clients can force sex workers to have sex. If someone has sex with you once, even when you paid for it, she/he does not have the obligation to have sex with you again if she/he does not consent. 5. Gender-based violence is defined as “An umbrella term for any act, omission, or conduct that is perpetuated against a person’s will and that is based on socially ascribed differences (gender) between males and females”. Men who have sex with men defy the socially ascribed roles for males and females and, as a result, may experience abuse and violence. This is considered a form of gender-based violence, although it is more precisely described as violence on the basis of sexual orientation.
Activity Exercise 7: Video Clip - Consent (3')	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of the participants to watch the video “Tea consent” is to have a better understanding of the concept of “consent” and to have no tolerance to sexual activity without explicit mutual and voluntary consent. Sexual abuse cannot be accepted under any circumstances. Instructions given by Facilitators The facilitator will play the youtube video “Tea Consent” - https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oQbei5JGiT8 After watching the video the trainees will be consulted on the takes-away, asking about their opinion.
Activity Exercise 8:	Consent is crucial in preventing gender-based violence because it upholds

Take-Away Points from Exercise: Video Clip - Consent (3')	the fundamental principle of respect for individuals' autonomy and bodily integrity. Consent ensures that individuals have control over their bodies and actions. It emphasises the importance of respecting each person's right to make decisions about their own lives, including when it comes to physical intimacy. When consent is absent or coerced, it can lead to situations of abuse and violence. By prioritising the concept of affirmative, enthusiastic consent, it helps prevent situations where one person may manipulate or force another into unwanted or uncomfortable actions. Promoting a culture of consent empowers individuals to assert their boundaries and desires without fear of judgement or repercussions. It educates on respecting each other's wils.
Activity Exercise 9: (Game) Myths and Facts (15')	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to critically reflect on our perceptions and beliefs that affect the care we provide to survivors. This exercise titled “Myths and Facts” is taken by WHO. 2021. Caring for women subjected to violence: A WHO training curriculum for health care providers. Revised Edition. Facilitator materials Handouts Background Exercise 2.1, Option A: Myth or Fact? (15 minutes) https://cdn.who.int/media/docs/default-source/hrp/vaw/exercises-resources.pdf?sfvrsn=f52c3441_12 Instructions to Facilitators: Explain that you would like to spend some time exploring some common myths about violence. ■ Ask the participants to share any local beliefs they have heard related to violence against women. ■ Read the first statement of the facilitator’s resource, “Myth or Fact?” to the group. ■ Ask the group whether they think this is a fact or a myth. See if there is agreement within the group or not. ■ Ask one person who believes it is a fact and one who believes it to be a myth to explain the reason for their response. ■ Provide the answer. Note that the statement is a myth or a fact and give the reason.

	■ Repeat this for another three statements. (Select statements that seem most relevant to the group.) Spend no more than 3 minutes on each statement. The Statements: 1. Gender-based violence only happens to a certain “type” of person. 2. Most women are abused by strangers. 3. A woman will finally be safe when she leaves the relationship. 4. Women must like the violence; otherwise, they would just leave the abusive relationship. 5. Men are naturally violent and cannot help themselves. 6. Women who experience violence at the hands of their partners “deserve” it. If she had acted differently, it would not have happened.
Activity Exercise 8: Take-Away Points from Exercise: (Game) Myths and Facts (Answers)	Answers for the above Activity Exercise 3 (Game): This exercise titled “Myths and Facts” is taken by WHO. 2021. Caring for women subjected to violence: A WHO training curriculum for health care providers. https://cdn.who.int/media/docs/default-source/hrp/vaw/exercises-resources.pdf?sfvrsn=f52c3441_12 The purpose of this exercise is to reflect on how our personal beliefs about violence against women and values might affect the care that we as health-care providers offer to survivors. ■ Our beliefs and attitudes often reflect the norms and values of the societies we live in. It is important to reflect on these norms and whether they might harm survivors. We must challenge them in our interactions with survivors and as role models to our patients and communities. ■ Women subjected to violence are often acutely aware and can sense when people have negative beliefs and opinions about them. If we are aware of our negative beliefs, we can better avoid communicating them to survivors of violence. ■ Changing mindsets takes time. However, it is possible to change our beliefs and attitudes, and it is healthy to examine and adjust them if necessary.

	1. FACT: Studies show that gender-based violence can happen among people of all socio- economic, educational and racial backgrounds. Violence may affect our peers, colleagues and friends (http://linkinghub.elsevier.com/retrieve/pii/S0140673606695238) 2. FACT: Studies consistently show that most women who experience sexual violence are abused by people they know; often the perpetrators are those they trust and love (1). Globally, women’s homicides are six times more likely than men’s to be committed by an intimate partner (2). 3. FACT: Violence often continues and may even increase after a woman leaves her partner. In fact, a woman’s risk of being murdered is greatest immediately after separation (3). 4. FACT: There are many barriers preventing women from leaving a violent relationship. These include financial dependence on the abuser for the survival of herself and/or her children, pressure from society and family to maintain the relationship, and a lack of options regarding where to go (1). Leaving can be dangerous. The most dangerous time for a woman who is being abused is when she tries to leave. 5. FACT: Male violence is not genetic. It is enabled by norms around masculinity, which permit and even encourage men to be aggressive. Men are often able to control their violence in certain settings, such as at work, while choosing to be violent at home. 6. FACT: It is never the survivor’s fault. As health-care providers, it is important to examine our values and beliefs about gender roles. If you feel that women provoke violence against themselves, you should not identify and respond to violence against women until you understand that women do not deserve to be physically, emotionally or sexually assaulted under any circumstances.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What patterns emerge from global and regional data on GBV prevalence? How does data from Jamaica compare to global trends in GBV? How do intersecting identities impact experiences of GBV in various communities? What are the health implications for victims/survivors of GBV? How have response mechanisms and support systems adapted to address the surge in gender-based violence (GBV) during COVID-19?

Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Gender-Based Violence (GBV) is a pervasive issue that affects individuals and society as a whole. It transcends geographical, cultural, and economic boundaries. GBV is rooted in power imbalances, gender stereotypes, and societal norms, making it crucial to challenge and address these underlying factors. It is essential to provide support and resources to victims/survivors of GBV while also working on preventive measures and advocating for change. Understanding GBV requires a comprehensive approach, taking into account the intersectionality of factors such as race, class, sexual orientation, and gender identity. Prevalence data provides insights into the widespread nature of gender-based violence (GBV) globally and locally. Understanding intersecting identities is crucial to address the complexity of GBV experiences. The consequences of GBV extend to health, economies, and societies as a whole. COVID-19 has exacerbated existing vulnerabilities and increased the incidence of GBV. Efforts should focus on prevention, support, and systemic change to combat GBV effectively.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture Presentation with powerpoint Exercises – Utilisation of Scenarios/Case Studies Role Play Exercise Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Decks - Entitled “ PPT13 - Defining DV ” Case Studies; Projector;
Handouts:	Not Applicable
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objectives to which the participants will familiarise themselves. (PPT13 Slide 3) The session will continue by providing a brief overview of domestic violence, including its definition (PPT13 Slide 4) and various forms such as physical, emotional, sexual (PPT13 Slide 5) Participants should be encouraged to share their understanding and experiences related to domestic violence. The facilitator will Introduce common signs and symptoms associated with domestic violence, such as unexplained injuries, frequent absences from work or social events, anxiety, depression, and isolation. The facilitator will then utilise support powerpoint slides (PPT13 Slides 6-8) to discuss the concept of control and the ways it may manifest itself through incidences of domestic violence. This section aims to foster an understanding of the dynamics involved in controlling relationships. In continuing the session, (PPT13 Slides 9-11) will be utilised to delve into physical abuse, with the facilitator providing a comprehensive view of its various forms and consequences. The facilitator will guide the discussion through (PPT13 Slides 12 to 15), where we'll explore the complex and sensitive issue of sexual abuse within domestic relationships. The next focus of the facilitator's discussion (PPT13 Slides 16-19), will be on emotional abuse, helping participants grasp the subtle yet profound ways it impacts victims/survivors and their families. Moving forward, the facilitator will navigate through (PPT13 Slides 20-21), unravelling the concept of isolation and its role in perpetuating domestic violence. The facilitator's exploration of the power dynamics involved in verbal abuse (PPT13 Slide 22), emphasising the importance of recognizing and addressing this form of violence will be the following topic. To continue the session, economic abuse will be discussed next (PPT13 Slides 23 to 25), with the facilitator guiding the exploration of how financial control can be wielded as a tool of abuse within relationships. The session will continue with the facilitator examining the statistics on domestic violence presented in (PPT13 Slides 30 to 31). These statistics will provide a broader perspective on the prevalence and impact of domestic violence. To conclude the session, the facilitator will instruct the participants in carrying out Activity Exercise 1 - a case study exercise.

Activity Exercise 1 Case Study	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of the case study is to identify the types of abuse that has occurred and possible solutions to the situation. Instructions given by Facilitators: The facilitator will break the participants into smaller groups or pairs to analyse the given case studies to identify the types of domestic violence that appears in the case and possible solutions to the situation presented. The facilitator will give guiding questions to the participants and a collective debrief will be done through presentations from each group.

	The facilitator will encourage open dialogue while ensuring everyone has a chance to speak and validate contributions and maintain a non-judgmental atmosphere. Participants will be asked about their takeaways or any new perspectives gained.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	What types of abuse are evident in the case study? How do these types of abuse manifest in different ways? What are the potential impacts of each form of abuse on the victim? How might one form of abuse intersect with or lead to another?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Domestic violence encompasses various behaviours and actions used by one person in a relationship to control the other. Domestic Violence is prevalent across diverse demographics and the profound impact it has on victims, families, and communities. The availability of support systems, shelters, hotlines, legal aid, and counselling services for victims/survivors seeking help and guidance should be emphasised.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How prevalent is domestic violence? Why is it important to address domestic violence? What resources and support systems are available for victims?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Domestic violence can take many forms and is not limited to physical abuse. - Recognizing different types of abuse is essential to understanding its impact. Recognizing the signs of domestic violence can help in supporting victims/survivors and intervening effectively. - Trusting one's instincts and taking action can make a significant difference.

Unit 4 - Defining Domestic Violence

TOPIC: Impact of Domestic Violence

SUB-TOPICS	Specific impacts of domestic violence on the following groups: Individual; Children; Family & Community Impact of domestic violence on Human Rights
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Understand the definition, and forms and types of domestic violence Explore the short-term and long-term impact of domestic violence on individuals and families. Discuss the impact of domestic violence on the community and society as a whole Explain the impact of domestic violence on human rights of individuals
Competencies:	• Ability to recognize the physical, emotional, and behavioural contributing factors of domestic violence. • Understanding the psychological, social, and economic consequences of domestic violence. • Awareness of the broader implications of domestic violence on social structures and public health.
Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes

Training Techniques:	Lecture Presentation with powerpoint Case Study Exercise Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled “ PPT13 - Defining Domestic Violence ” Case Studies; Projector; Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR)
Handouts:	Not applicable
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will begin the session by introducing themselves and the objectives of the session. The facilitator will provide a brief overview of domestic violence, including its definition and various forms (physical, emotional, sexual, etc.). Participants should be encouraged to share their understanding of the concept of domestic violence. The facilitator will then introduce an overview on the effects of domestic violence on victims/survivors, children, and the overall family dynamics and the community. The session will continue by discussing the topic and its pertinence to nation-building using the content on (PPT13 Slides 32-33). After highlighting key points, the facilitator will prompt participants to actively engage with the material and propose strategies for mitigating negative impacts. The facilitator will then transition seamlessly to the next set of slides (PPT13 Slides 34-35) focusing on the direct impact of domestic violence on individuals, utilising the powerpoints to visually emphasise the challenges faced by victims/survivors and potential support mechanisms. The facilitator will then progress to (PPT13 Slide 36) and engage participants in a discussion about how families are affected by the domestic violence issue, highlighting immediate and long-term consequences.

	Next, the facilitator will navigate to the (PPT13 Slide 37) illustrating the impact of domestic violence on the community as a whole. The facilitator will then shift focus to the unique impact of domestic violence on children using (PPT13 Slides 38-40). The facilitator will emphasise the potential long-term consequences for children and the preventative measures and strategies to safeguard their well-being. The session will continue by the facilitator delving into the domestic violence implications for the legal and justice system (PPT13 Slide 41). Together with the participants, the facilitator will explore the role of the justice system in addressing this societal issue and the potential challenges in legal proceedings and suggest improvements. The facilitator will initiate a discussion on the impact of domestic violence on human rights of individuals. Reference should be made here to the Universal Declaration on Human Rights (UDHR) to which Jamaica is ratified. The participants will be asked to engage in critical thinking and take note of the correlation of domestic violence and human rights. The facilitator will then ask each participant to share their thoughts. After all participants have shared their thoughts, the facilitator will inform the participants of key areas of human rights that should be explored such as: The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) outlines fundamental rights and freedoms that everyone is entitled to, regardless of race, colour, religion, sex, language, or other status. Domestic violence significantly infringes upon several rights enshrined in the UDHR. Here are some examples: Right to Life, Liberty, and Security of Person (Article 3): Domestic violence threatens the right to life and security. Victims often live in constant fear for their safety, enduring physical, emotional, and psychological harm. Freedom from Torture and Degrading Treatment (Article 5): Domestic violence inflicts severe physical and psychological suffering, constituting cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment. It strips victims of their dignity and self-worth. Right to Recognition as a Person before the Law (Article 6): Victims of domestic violence may face obstacles in accessing justice due to fear, intimidation, or lack of support. Their legal recognition and protection can be hindered by the perpetrator's control. Equality before the Law (Article 7): Domestic violence often perpetuates unequal power dynamics, violating the principle of equality between partners or family members. This inequality can prevent victims from seeking help or justice. Right to Marriage and Family (Article 16): Domestic violence disrupts the right to a safe and nurturing family environment. It undermines the essence of family, causing profound harm to both adults and children within the household. Right to Health (Article 25): Victims of domestic violence often suffer physical injuries and mental health issues. Access to adequate healthcare and support is crucial for recovery and well-being. Right to Education (Article 26): Domestic violence can impact a victim's ability to access education, whether due to physical injuries, psychological trauma, or disruptions caused by the abusive situation. Right to an Adequate Standard of Living (Article 25): Economic control and abuse are prevalent in domestic violence situations, leading to financial insecurity and difficulties in maintaining a decent standard of living for the victim and any dependents. To culminate the session, the facilitator will allow the participants to engage in Activity Exercise 1 - case study. After the completion of the exercise, the facilitator will review the key points that were highlighted in the session and leave the floor open to questions from the participants.

Activity Exercise 1 Case Study	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of the case study exercise is to ascertain the various categories of impact of domestic violence on the persons in the case provided. Instructions given by Facilitators: Divide participants into small groups. Assign each group a different case study involving a domestic violence situation. Instruct them to discuss and analyse the impact of domestic violence on the victim/survivor including their human rights, children, family and the community. Each group presents their findings to the whole class.

Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	How does domestic violence affect the physical and mental health of victims/survivors? How does domestic violence affect children who witness or experience it? What are the broader societal consequences of domestic violence? How does it impact employment, financial stability, and overall community well-being?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Physical injuries and long-term physical and mental health consequences often result from sustained abuse. Children witnessing domestic violence suffer profound emotional and psychological damage. Breaking the cycle of violence is crucial to prevent its transmission to future generations as levels within society are affected by domestic violence. Domestic Violence and gender-based violence are human rights issues that require a holistic approach to ensure the protection and promotion of human rights.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What resources and support systems are available for victims/survivors of domestic violence? What legal measures and policies are in place to address and prevent domestic violence? How can communities and organisations better support victims/survivors and prevent future occurrences?
Wrap- Up/ Key	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points

Messages	and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Recognizing the different types of domestic violence is important in understanding its impact. Domestic violence has severe and lasting effects on individuals, families, and future generations. Empathy and support can play a crucial role in helping victims/survivors break free from the cycle of abuse. Domestic violence is not just a personal issue; it affects the entire community. Creating a society that actively addresses and prevents domestic violence is crucial for the well-being of everyone. Enforcing human rights can create a safer environment and empower victims to seek help and justice while holding perpetrators accountable.

Unit 4 - Defining Domestic Violence

TOPIC: Trauma as an effect of Domestic Violence

SUB-TOPICS	Effects of Trauma in Domestic Violence on the following groups: Individual; Children; Family & Community The role of empathy in dealing with trauma responses The various physical, emotional and psychological reactions individuals may have to trauma.
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	● Understand the definition of the concept trauma ● Identify the signs and symptoms of trauma due to domestic violence ● Explore the short-term and long-term impact of trauma in domestic violence ● Develop an understanding of the psychological and emotional impact of trauma on victims/survivors of domestic violence. ● Recognize the signs and symptoms of trauma in domestic violence survivors.

	• Learn how to provide trauma-informed support and care to victims/survivors of domestic violence. • Explore strategies for preventing trauma in domestic violence situations and breaking the cycle of violence. • Understand the available resources and legal measures for victims/survivors of domestic violence.
Competencies:	• Indicators of Domestic Violence: Ability to recognize the physical, emotional, and psychological indicators of and the consequences of domestic violence. • Empathy and Active Listening: Develop the ability to listen actively and empathetically to survivors. • Crisis Intervention: Learn how to effectively respond to crisis situations. • Trauma-Informed Communication: Practise communicating with sensitivity and understanding of trauma's effects. • Safety Planning: Be able to assist victims/survivors in creating safety plans. • Cultural Competency: Understand and respect diverse cultural perspectives on domestic violence and trauma.
Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture Presentation with powerpoint Role Play Exercise Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled “ PPT17 - Trauma in Domestic Violence ” Projector
Handouts:	Case Study
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objectives. An exploration of the main effects of domestic violence will then be carried out by the facilitator with the participants being given a chance to give their own examples.

	The session will continue by the facilitator introducing the concept of trauma and explaining that the purpose of this session is to explore the causes of trauma and its general impact on individuals. (PPT17 Slide 3) The facilitator will proceed to (PPT17 Slides 4-5) to discuss the specific challenges and experiences related to trauma in domestic violence situations. The participants will be encouraged to reflect on the content and ask questions as needed. The facilitator will then move to (PPT17 Slide 6), where they will explore the various physical, emotional and psychological reactions individuals may have to trauma. The session will be continued with the participants discussing coping mechanisms, resilience, and the importance of seeking support with the facilitator, who will use (PPT17 Slide 7-10) as a guide. The facilitator will transition to (PPT17 Slide 11), to discuss common indicators and signs of trauma (Symptoms of Trauma). The facilitator will explain how recognizing these symptoms can help individuals seek assistance and support. Real-life scenarios may be used to illustrate the symptoms. To conclude the lecture presentation, the facilitator will move to (PPT17 Slide 12), where they will present the various methods and resources available for healing and recovery from trauma. After completing Slide 12, the facilitator will transition to a designated Q&A and discussion slide (PPT17 Slide 13). Here the participants will be invited to ask questions, share their insights, and engage in a group activity (Activity Exercise 1 - Role play exercise). To culminate the facilitator will summarise the key takeaways from the presentation and provide additional resources for further learning or support. The participants will be thanked for their active participation and encourage them to continue the dialogue on trauma and healing beyond the session.

Activity Exercise 1 Role Play Exercise:	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of the Role play exercises is to enhance the knowledge base of the participants in how to best deal with traumatic domestic violence situations. Instructions given by Facilitators The participants will be divided into small groups where they will be required to conduct role play exercises where the participants will assume the roles of victims/survivors and various support personnel such as: 1. The Supportive Friend: Participants act as friends providing emotional support to a victim/survivor. 2. Crisis Helpline Operator: Participants take on the role of crisis helpline operators offering guidance and assistance. 3. Law Enforcement Response: Explore how police officers can respond to domestic violence calls with sensitivity to trauma. 4. Legal Advocate: Practise offering legal advocacy and resources to victims/survivors. 5. Counsellor: Participants take on the role of counsellors providing therapy to survivors. The facilitator will instruct them to engage in a conversation where the victim/survivor expresses their feelings and experiences while the supporter offers empathy and resources. Group discussions will be facilitated after each role play to debrief and reflect on the experiences.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	Reflect on the exercise and discuss the impact of domestic violence on the victim/survivor in relation to trauma experienced How can we recognize trauma in domestic violence victims/survivors? What strategies can be employed to support victims/survivors in a trauma-informed manner?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Trauma manifests differently in individuals; there is no one-size-fits-all approach to healing. Trauma is a real and debilitating consequence of domestic violence.

Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What are the legal measures available to protect domestic violence victims/survivors? How can we break the cycle of violence and prevent further harm in domestic violence situations?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: It is essential to approach victims/survivors who have experienced trauma with empathy, respect, and without judgement.

Handouts:	H4 - Improva - Indicators of Domestic Violence
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will begin the presentation by introducing themselves and the objectives of the session along with an introduction to the topic. (PPT14 slide 3-4) The facilitator will distribute the handout H4 - Improva - Indicators of Domestic Violence for the participants to review. After giving the participants a chance to review, a discussion will be led by the facilitator on the indicators of domestic violence on the list. The facilitator will continue the session by highlighting the importance of understanding domestic violence in the context of culture and socialisation. This will be done through defining the concepts of culture and socialisation. (PPT14 slides 5-7) and explaining how these concepts are interconnected and lay the foundation for understanding domestic violence within different cultural contexts. Examples should be provided here by both the facilitator and the participants. The facilitator will then pause the session to introduce the first group activity (Activity Exercise 1) on (PPT14 Slide 8) and instruct participants on how to proceed. The facilitator will provide relevant discussion questions or scenarios related to how culture and socialisation affects general thought and behaviour patterns.

	After the groups have presented their findings of the Activity Exercise 1 and debriefing has occurred, the facilitator will introduce the second activity, (PPT14 Slide 8). The facilitator will then direct the participants on how to approach the exercise and provide them with the necessary materials to do so. (Activity Exercise 2) The participants in their groups will present their findings to their peers. (PPT14 Slide 9) Next, the participants will then provide the class with a question for group discussion - Does culture and socialisation affect the reporting and police response? (PPT14 Slide 10) The participants will get a few minutes to contemplate and then share their insights and observations. Open dialogue will be encouraged and the exploration of various perspectives related to domestic violence and culture and socialisation. The session will continue with an exploration into family and domestic violence and explaining how issues within the family can contribute to domestic violence. (PPT14 Slide 11-16) The facilitator will then cover various aspects of family and domestic violence, such as types, signs, and consequences. The facilitator may provide detailed information on the topic, using statistics, case studies, or real-world examples to emphasise the importance of addressing domestic violence. The session will continue by delving into the historical context of domestic violence, highlighting how societal attitudes and responses have evolved over time. (PPT14 Slide 11-16). The facilitator will go on to explain the significance of historical context in shaping current perceptions and approaches to domestic violence. The facilitator will then explore the concept of human trafficking and how it may be a contributing factor of domestic violence. With reference to The Trafficking in Persons Act, which the participants may explore further in the online references, the facilitator will make special note of the following to the participants: In some cases, individuals who have been trafficked may experience domestic violence within the context of their trafficking situation. Traffickers often exert control over their victims through physical, emotional, and psychological means, creating an environment of fear and coercion. This can include various forms of abuse that align with domestic violence. Furthermore, survivors of trafficking may find themselves in abusive domestic situations after escaping or being rescued from their traffickers. They might face challenges in reintegrating into society, which can make them vulnerable to

	further exploitation or abuse within a domestic setting. Trafficking survivors might also struggle with trauma, mental health issues, and a lack of support systems, all of which can contribute to susceptibility to domestic violence or abusive relationships. To culminate the session, the facilitator will explore the ethical considerations of domestic violence and provide a list of references and resources for participants to explore further if they wish to delve deeper into the topic while summarising the key points discussed in the presentation.
Activity Exercise 1 Culture & Socialisation Exercise	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this group activity is to ascertain what messages individuals may hear or are taught through culture and socialisation. Instructions given by Facilitators: Facilitators will instruct the participants in their notebook to make a list of some of the messages/ actions learnt as a young person about how men and women should or should not behave. Each participant will present to the group some of these messages and discussion to follow.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	These questions may promote ideas for the participants: What messages did your family convey about how men and women should behave or were there specific expectations or stereotypes associated with gender roles in your household? How did media (TV shows, movies, books) portray gender roles during your formative years? or Were there cultural or societal expectations that influenced your perception of gender behaviour?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Domestic violence is a complex issue with multiple contributing factors, and it's essential to address these factors to prevent it effectively. Cultural norms and social attitudes can either perpetuate or challenge domestic violence, making it vital to challenge harmful stereotypes and promote healthy relationships.

Activity Exercise 2 Group Activity on Ideal Partners	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of this group activity is to assist participants to ascertain key characteristics of their ideal partners based on norms of the society. Instructions given by Facilitators The facilitator will instruct the participants to sketch their ideal man or woman and make a list of the key features they are looking for in an ideal man or woman based on societal norms. The participants will then label the drawing with these characteristics. This will be done on the sketch pads provided in small groups. The participants will then present what they have come up with to their peers for discussion.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How does what characteristics we view as our ideal partner influence views on intimate partner relationships and power and control in relationships?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Domestic violence can take many forms and is not limited to physical abuse. Recognizing different types of abuse is essential to understanding the root causes. Empathy and support are essential for victims/survivors of domestic violence, and it's important to provide resources and help to those in need. Preventing domestic violence requires a collective effort, involving individuals, communities, and society as a whole. Culture and socialisation may affect the response of the police in a domestic violence situation. Although human trafficking and domestic violence are distinct issues with their own complexities, human trafficking can contribute to various forms of domestic violence.

MODULE THREE: JAMAICAN LEGISLATIVE FRAMEWORK RELATED TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Unit 6 - Jamaican Legislative Framework related to Domestic Violence

Topic: Legislative Framework

Sub-Topics:	● Domestic Violence Act (1996) ● Sexual Harassment Act (2021) ● Application of orders under the Domestic Violence Act. ● Other legislation in relation to domestic violence and abuse.
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Explain the rights and protections offered to victims/survivors covered under the Domestic Violence Act. Understand the scope and purpose of the Domestic Violence Act Describe the tenets of the Sexual Harassment Act
Competencies:	Knowledge: Understanding the legal framework and mechanisms of the Domestic Violence Act. Communication: Communicating effectively about legal rights and available resources. Empathy and Support: Developing empathy towards victims and understanding their needs.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture presentation with powerpoint support Role Play Exercise Guided Discussion
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Decks - Entitled “PPT 19 - DV Act 1996 Presentation” Projector Domestic Violence Act (1996) - Found in online references Domestic Violence Bill Amendment (2023) - Found in online references Sexual Harassment Act (2021) - Found in online references
Handouts	Affidavit Form ; Domestic Violence Act (1996)
Session Content
Lecture Presentation and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objectives of the session. The participants will then be engaged by the facilitator by discussing what is domestic violence (PPT 19 Slide 3) and how the concept is not gender specific. (PPT 19 Slide 4). The session will continue with the facilitator explaining the law on domestic violence which is governed by the Domestic Violence Act of 1996 (PPT 19 Slides 5-7) The Facilitator may pause here to ask if the participants have any queries on what has been discussed so far. Based on the nature of the incidents of domestic violence the facilitator will explain the main orders that could be applied for under the Domestic Violence Act (1996) by the victim/survivor namely the Protection Order and the Occupation Order (PPT 19 Slides 8-13). The Facilitator will continue the lecture presentation with an explanation on the Ancillary Order where Occupation Order has been granted. (PPT 19 Slide 14) The lecture presentation will continue with an exploration of the subtopics applying for Ex-parte applications for occupation orders (PPT 19 Slides 15-17) and other orders than can be made (PPT 19 Slide 18) The facilitator will then examine the Sexual Harassment act and its tenets in relation to domestic violence. The facilitator will then discuss examples of other legislations such as the Sexual Offences Act and the Child Care and Protection Act that have relevance in dealing with issues related to domestic violence. The session will culminate with a question and answer exercise to ensure that the facts under each law is understood by the participants.

Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What constitutes domestic violence under Jamaican law? How does the Domestic Violence Act (DVA) protect victims/survivors and what legal steps can they take? What are the roles of law enforcement in supporting victims under the DVA? What challenges might victims/survivors face in seeking help under the DVA
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Emphasis should be placed on citizens knowing their legal rights under the Domestic Violence Act. It is important to understand what constitutes sexual harassment as per the law in Jamaica. It typically involves any unwanted sexual attention, advances, requests for sexual favours, or any other verbal or physical conduct that creates an uncomfortable or hostile environment. Recognize that the Jamaican law has a zero-tolerance policy towards sexual harassment in workplaces, institutions, and public spaces.

TOPIC: Role of the Police in Domestic Violence

SUB-TOPICS	Ways in which the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) responds to domestic violence Jamaica Constabulary Force Standards of Procedure Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) Force Orders Domestic Violence Act
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives: At the end of the session, participants should be able to:	● Define and recognize domestic violence, including its various forms and the dynamics involved. ● Understand the importance of domestic violence response ● Address cultural considerations and biases in chosen interventions ● Comprehend the relevant laws and standards of procedures related to domestic violence and the responsibilities of the police ● Describe the appropriate police response in domestic violence situations, including initial contact, risk assessment, and victim/survivor support. ● Understand the importance of working with various community and support agencies to address domestic violence effectively. ● Consider cultural and societal factors that may influence domestic violence and how to respond sensitively

Competencies:	Communication: Develop effective communication skills to de-escalate tense situations, interview victims/survivors and witnesses, and coordinate with other agencies. Risk Assessment: Learn to assess the risk level in domestic violence cases, ensuring the safety of victims/survivors and identifying potential harm. Conflict Resolution: Acquire conflict resolution skills to mediate and handle disputes in domestic violence situations. Empathy and Support: Understand the importance of empathy and providing emotional support to victims. Legal Knowledge: Have a comprehensive understanding of the legal framework surrounding domestic violence, including arrest procedures and restraining orders.

Session Content
Background and Lecture Presentation	The facilitator will commence the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training through explaining the objectives of the training, what participants can expect to learn, and the importance of their role in responding to domestic violence incidents. (PPT21 Slides 1-

--	--	--

	2) A brief overview of the definition of domestic violence and who commits domestic violence will then be explored. (PPT21 Slides 3-4) The participants will then be further engaged by the facilitator in understanding the importance of the proper domestic violence response of the police by looking at the Cycle of violence and abuse (PPT21 Slide 5), the impact of socialisation and culture on the response of the police in domestic violence situations (PPT21 Slide 6) and the power and control wheel (PPT21 Slide 7). Examples of domestic violence interventions may be used here to illustrate points, emphasising the role of law enforcement in ensuring victim safety and enforcing the law. The session will continue with the familiarisation of the relevant laws and procedures related to domestic violence with clear explanation of the legal framework that governs the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF)’s response to domestic violence incidents. Specific highlights will be made of the JCF Standards of Procedure (SOP) in Dealing with Domestic Violence (DV) JCF Force Order 3991 (PPT21 Slide 8) and the JCF DV Policy Statement (PPT21 Slides 9-11). Other important policies to be adhered to such as the Domestic Violence (DV) Act (1996) (PPT21 Slide 12) and the Occupation Order (PPT21 Slide 13) will then be discussed. The facilitator will pause here to ask participants if they have any questions about what has been taught so far. The facilitator will continue by turning the attention of the participants to the difference in treatment for married people (PPT21 Slide 14). This discussion will lead to the participants what happens if there is a failure to obey the law. (PPT21 Slide 15-16) An exploration of the Criminal Charges that can arise from Acts of Domestic Violence (PPT21 Slide 17) and the Legislative Authority of the police (PPT21 Slide 18) will be discussed. The facilitator will explore strategies to prevent Domestic Violence such as effective communication and de-escalation techniques. (PPT21 Slides 19-21) This will be followed by what should JCF Do? (PPT21 Slides 22-23) The facilitator will pause the lecture discussion to allow the participants to engage in Activity Exercise 1. The session will reconvene with an exploration of the role of the DVI Care Centres (PPT21 Slides 22-24) and Domestic Violence Referral Points (PPT21 Slides 25) The facilitator will conclude the session (PPT21 Slide 26) and thank the participants for their active engagement and participation. Reiterate the importance of their role in responding to domestic violence incidents and supporting victims.

Activity Exercise 1 Case study	Learning Objective for Exercise: The aim of this case study exercise is to explore the role of the police in the proper handling of domestic violence cases. Instructions given by Facilitators: Divide participants into small groups. Assign each group a different case study involving domestic violence. Instruct them to discuss and analyse and identify signs of risk and safety concerns during police responses. Facilitate a group discussion on cultural sensitivity and potential biases in domestic violence interventions.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	Can you recognize potential risks and safety concerns in domestic violence cases? What are the legal responsibilities of law enforcement in domestic violence cases? How do police officers assess and manage the risk to victims/survivors in domestic violence situations? What are the best practices for communication and conflict resolution in these cases?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Police play a critical role in responding to domestic violence incidents to ensure victim/survivor safety and uphold the law. Identifying risks helps police assess the level of danger and implement appropriate safety measures for victims/survivors Knowledge of laws and procedures helps police respond effectively and protect victims' rights. Effective communication and de-escalation skills can defuse volatile situations and facilitate positive outcomes.

Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	Can you recognize potential risks and safety concerns in domestic violence cases? Continuous Training: Stay updated on evolving best practices and legal changes related to domestic violence. Personal Well-being: Ensure officers are aware of and receive support for the emotional toll that dealing with domestic violence cases can take.
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: The safety of the victim/survivor and the police officers are paramount in domestic violence situations. Early intervention and prevention are essential in reducing the prevalence of domestic violence. The survivor-centred approach should be utilised in every case where empathy is emphasised and the focus is on the needs and safety of the victim/survivor. Multidisciplinary collaboration ensures effective responses to domestic violence require collaboration with social services, legal professionals, and community organisations. Understand the cultural and societal factors that can influence domestic violence dynamics and tailor your response accordingly.

MODULE THREE - JAMAICAN LEGAL FRAMEWORK RELATIVE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Unit 6 - Legal Framework Relative to Domestic Violence

TOPIC: Risk Assessment

SUB-TOPICS	• What is Risk Assessment? • Risk factors and Warning signs of domestic violence
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	• Define domestic violence and explore its prevalence • Identify common risk factors and warning signs associated with domestic violence, including patterns of abusive behaviour and escalation. • Distinguish between high-risk and lower-risk situations. • Develop a systematic process for assessing domestic violence risk. • Collect and analyse relevant information, including victim and perpetrator histories and current circumstances. • Utilise risk assessment forms and frameworks • Understand the importance of the survivor-centered approach. • Practise ethical considerations in risk assessment
Competencies:	• Assessment Skills: Ability to identify signs and symptoms of domestic violence and develop the skill in conducting risk assessments, including using assessment forms where appropriate. • Analysis of Data: Gathering and analysing relevant information from multiple sources. • Communication Skills: Effective communication with victims/survivors, perpetrators, and other professionals and skill in delivering information about available resources and options for victims.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture presentation with powerpoint Exercises – Scenarios/Case Studies Role Play Exercise Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled- “PPT 18 Risk Assessment in DV” Case Studies; Projector; Handouts
Handouts:	Risk Assessment Form
Session Content
Background and Lecture Presentation	The Facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objectives. (PPT 18 Slide 1) An exploration of the participants' understanding of domestic violence will be carried out during the introduction whilst identifying if there are risks associated with dealing with domestic violence incidents (PPT 18 Slide 2) The facilitator will then discuss the four main principles of risk assessment (PPT 18 Slide 4). This discussion with the participants will develop into a look into the purpose and elements of risk assessment (PPT18 Slides 5-8). The facilitator will then explore identifying risk factors (PPT 18 Slides 9-11) Risk related information to check which differs according to which agency it is being viewed from, in the case of the police. (PPT 18 Slide 12) The first activity will be carried out here which will familiarise the participants to the risk assessment form and they will be asked to fill them out during the Case Study Activity 1 to follow. (See Handout - Risk Assessment Form) Once a Risk Assessment is done, the necessary actions to be taken will be outlined to the participants (PPT 18 Slides 13-15). The facilitator will use the opportunity to discuss with the group any biases or barriers that may affect the assessment. This will allow for critical thinking among the participants who will be asked to give their own views. *If time allows the second activity Role Play Exercise (Activity 2) can be carried out. The lecture presentation and discussion will culminate with what elements should be part of the follow-up such as maintaining regular contact with the victim. (PPT 18 Slide 16)

Activity Exercise 1 Case Study	Learning Objective for Exercise: The Case Study exercise aims to give the participants a chance to gain an understanding of the importance of assessing risks in domestic violence. Instructions given by Facilitators: Divide participants into small groups or pairs. Assign each group a different case study involving a domestic violence situation. Instruct them to discuss and analyse the perceived risks and warning signs within the domestic violence scenario especially in relation to the victims/survivors. Each group should utilise a risk assessment form for each case study and present their findings to the whole class.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	What are the potential risk factors and warning signs identified in the domestic violence scenario? What are the best practices in responding to high-risk cases? Highlight the techniques for an empathetic victim/survivor interview. How do you think cultural or social factors influence risk assessment?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Understanding the dynamics of domestic violence helps police respond appropriately and provide support. Identifying warning signs and risk factors helps to assess the level of perceived danger for victims/survivors. Effective risk assessment is crucial for ensuring the safety of domestic violence victims/survivors.

Activity Exercise 2 Role Play Exercise	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The role-play exercise aims to explore the benefits of well-structured and comprehensive assessment of domestic violence scenarios. Open and non-judgmental communication is crucial in all participants' demonstration and subsequent discussion of dynamics of each case. Instructions given by Facilitators Divide participants into small groups. Role play exercises will be conducted where participants assume the roles of victims/survivors; perpetrators. Witnesses and police officers assigned to the case. Instruct participants to enact scenarios that involve police officers interacting sensitively with victims/survivors and perpetrators. Emphasis will be placed on identifying the risks, unique dynamics and ethical considerations in each case. Facilitate group discussions after each role play to debrief and reflect on the experiences.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What resources are currently available to domestic violence victims? Discuss the ethical challenges in risk assessment. What is the importance of collaboration with support services (referral)?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Using tools such as a risk assessment form enhances the accuracy of assessing domestic violence cases. Cultural competence is vital in understanding the unique risks faced by diverse victims.

	Knowing available resources is crucial for providing appropriate assistance to victims Ethical practice ensures victim confidentiality and respect throughout the process.

Unit 7 - Survivor-Centred Approach for providers working with victim/survivors of GBV

- Facilitator Guideline - Survivor-Centred Approach and GBV Guiding Principles
- Facilitator Guideline - Survivor-Centred Communication

MODULE FOUR: RESPONSE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IN ACCORDANCE WITH NATIONAL POLICY FRAMEWORK AND INTERNATIONAL QUALITY STANDARDS

Unit 7 - Survivor-Centred Approach for providers working with victims/survivors of domestic violence

TOPIC: Survivor-Centred Approach and GBV Guiding Principles

SUB-TOPICS	The Survivor-Centred Approach The GBV Guiding Principles Intersectional Approach to GBV and the LNOB principle Gender neutrality when dealing with Domestic Violence
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Understand the survivor-centred approach and its importance in addressing gender-based violence. Gain knowledge of the guiding principles all providers must apply when addressing gender-based violence. Develop critical thinking skills for analysing and addressing the intersectionality of gender-based violence. Understand the challenges faced by men in accessing support services as victims/survivors in order to be able to provide unbiased services to both women and men.
Competencies:	Ability to empower the victims/survivors putting them at the centre of the gender-based violence (GBV) response. Ability to use the four (4) GBV principles when addressing victims/survivors: Safety, Confidentiality, No Discrimination, Respect. Ability to identify the intersection of different identities that can increase vulnerability to violence and/or challenge access to services. Ability to interact with victims/survivors without discriminating based on sex or any other status, as per the JCF Diversity Policy.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture presentation with powerpoint Roleplay/Games Group Activity Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled “PPT27 - Survivor-Centred Approach & GBV Guiding Principles - ES” Projector; Guided Discussion; Recommended Role Play/Game: Leave No One Behind GA1a -Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Characters GA1b-Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Instructions GA1c-Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Sentences

Session Content
Lecture Presentation and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objectives. The facilitator will then engage the participants in Activity Exercise 1 - L.N.O.B. Game (PPT27 Slide 2) Instructions and resources to be found in the toolkit. After the activity the facilitator will focus attention on what is the survivor centred approach the facilitator will introduce the four guiding principles of gender-based violence (PPT27 Slide 3). To continue the sessionThe facilitator will then individually look at each principle - Safety, Confidentiality, Respect & Non-discrimination.

	(PPT27 Slides 4-7) Each one should be discussed in detail with use of examples given by the participants. The facilitator will then highlight the Intersectional Approach to GBV (PPT27 Slide 8). Violence doesn't discriminate and some groups are more vulnerable than others. The facilitator will then lead the participants into delving into the concept Leave No One Behind (LNOB) where the focus will extend to exclusion and discrimination in relation to gender-based violence, whether by race, gender, sexual orientation, education level, disability and so on. (PPT27 Slides 9-10) This approach is in keeping with the 2030 Agenda and the Sustainable Development Goals. Next, the facilitator will introduce the topic achieving gender neutrality in gender-based violence and domestic violence (PPT27 Slide 11). The facilitator will emphasise that although women and girls and members of the LGBTQI community are disproportionately affected, men and boys are also affected by gender-based violence and domestic violence (PPT27 Slide 12). The facilitator will then ask the participants if they could think of any challenges that men may face in accessing support services. The facilitator using (PPT27 Slide 13) will compare their opinions with what is on the slide and discuss. The facilitator will then explore how gender neutrality may be achieved when dealing with domestic violence which includes a discussion on the JCF Public Interaction Policy and the JCF Diversity Policy. (PPT27 Slide 14). To culminate the session, the facilitator will then engage the participants with a series of questions for feedback in relation to the concepts taught in the session. (Q&A) (PPT27 Slide 15)
Activity Exercise 1 LNOB Game	Learning Objective for Exercise: This activity permits us to identify obstacles based on gender biases and stereotypes faced by men, women, girls, boys, and different marginalised populations. Instructions given by Facilitators: This exercise will be guided by resources in the toolkit: GA1a -Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Characters

	GA1b-Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Instructions GA1c-Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Sentences The facilitator will prepare a set of identities/characters - RG1a -Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Characters and a set of statements - RG1c-Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Sentences Each participant is given a small piece of paper or a cardboard card with a different identity/character he/she has to identify with, they are asked not to look at them until everyone is in place and the instructions are clear. See RG1b-Leave No One Behind (LNOB) Game Instructions. The facilitator gives the instructions: All participants have to stay in a line, it can be giving the back to a wall. The facilitator will read some statements. After listening to each statement each participant should think if this statement is true or false for the identity they were assigned in this role-play. Those who think that the statement is true for their game-identity, will have to make a step forward. Those who think that the same statement is false for the game-identity should stay where they are. When all participants are ready and confirm they understood, They are given the permission to read the cardboard card they are holding in their hands, but without showing it to their colleagues. They are given and have 1 minute of time to identify themselves with the subject written in their specific card. The facilitator can start reading some statements (the number depends on the time available). Participants have to step forward if they consider that the person with the identity they represent would say “yes”. At the end of the game a discussion will be facilitated. The participants who made the fewer steps will be asked first to explain what were the challenges they faced that impeded them to make any further steps , others will say why they could step forward. Each participant will present the situations they faced being the subject in their card and will express the obstacles, difficulties and discrimination they faced. This exercise permits an understanding of the challenges faced by people for their specific conditions/identities, that depend on physical barriers, biases, perceptions, fear of judgement, and other characteristics that limit the accessibility to quality services for different populations. Participants will be invited to reflect on how the intersection of these identities can increase the challenges. Participants will be invited to always implement the survivor centred approach, that will facilitate access to quality services to all, Leaving No One Behind.

Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Leave No One Behind is a fundamental principle of the Agenda 2030. So, all service providers have to assure that the fundamental human right to a life free from violence and to the highest level attainable of health is respected and have to offer services with quality, respect, confidentiality and no discrimination to everyone, in line with the survivor-centred approach.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What does it mean to have a survivor-centred approach when dealing with survivors of GBV? Why is the survivor centred approach important? What is the difference between the concepts of “victims” and “survivors”? What are the guiding principles for addressing gender-based violence, and how do they inform our approach? How can we ensure that our support services are culturally sensitive and inclusive of various victim/survivor experiences, guaranteeing to Leave No One Behind and ensuring an intersectional perspective?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Every victim/survivor's experience is unique, and it's essential to provide survivor centred services, guaranteeing the safety, confidentiality, respect and dignity of survivors.

	Understanding the intersectionality of gender-based violence helps us provide more inclusive and comprehensive support.

Unit 7 - Survivor-Centred Approach for providers working with victims/survivors of gender-based violence (GBV)

TOPIC: Survivor-Centred Communication Skills

SUB-TOPICS	DOs and DONTs when dealing with a victim/survivor of gender-based violence (GBV) Empathic (verbal and non-verbal) communication as a tool for healing Active Listening Communication techniques: validation, healing statements, paraphrasing, summarising L.I.V.E.S. Response to GBV victims/survivors
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Develop active listening skills in order to build trust, empower victims/survivors and support their healing process. Improve communication skills to practise empathy when dealing with victims/survivors, in line with the survivor-centred approach.
Competencies:	Empathy: Demonstrate understanding, support and empathy for victims/survivors' experiences and validate victims/survivors' feelings and experiences without judgement. Active Listening: Practise active listening to gather important information and convey understanding to encourage victims/survivors to share their stories. Communication Skills: Teach effective communication techniques that emphasise validation, no-judgement, support and sensitivity when discussing sensitive topics. This includes both verbal and non-verbal

Lecture Presentation and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objectives. Within the introduction, the facilitator will explain the purpose of the session is to contribute to an improvement in the communication skills of providers to express empathy, in line with the survivor-centred approach. The facilitator will emphasise the importance of always taking into account what are the recommended actions to take once a victim/survivor discloses. These DOs express validation of emotion, understanding, non judgemental and unconditional support, belief and willingness to offer a listening ear and support as possible. (PPT27 Slide 2) The facilitator will also express the importance of memorising what actions/attitudes are absolutely necessary to avoid (DONTs) (PPT27 Slide 2) when communicating with a victim/survivor of GBV. The participants will be asked if they think that the statement “Communication is a healing tool” is true or false, and a discussion wil

	be facilitated around this statement. They will also be asked if they think that communication can harm, and why (PPT27 Slide 3). This discussion will emphasise the importance of active listening, of empathic and non judgemental support as a healing tool, and how wrong judgemental communication can harm instead. Following the group discussion on communication, the facilitator will focus their attention on the concept of empathy as a way to identify others' emotions and validate their feelings. (PPT27 Slide 4) To reinforce the concept of empathy, the facilitator will then guide the participants in watching a video clip on empathy, opposed to sympathy Video Clip - Empathy - Brené Brown - El poder de la empatía (corto animado RSA.org) https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AyInqn_Hw_E A brief discussion will follow allowing the participants to give their opinion on the video clip seen. To reinforce the understanding and importance of empathy in the delivery of services to victims/survivors of GBV, the facilitator will highlight the differences between empathy (what is expected) and sympathy (what should be avoided) Empathy vs Sympathy/Assessment as depicted in (PPT27 Slides 5-6) emphasising (Expected vs Not expected or needed). The facilitator will inform the participants that: “Many times, we understand empathy as the ability to make the other person feel good. That is animate. It is great to have the ability to generate an optimistic and happy mood in the people around us, but that is not what we mean when we talk about empathy. Empathy is understanding and validating someone else's reaction. That skill is much more important than cheerleading. In fact, optimism and sympathy only have a positive effect when we have managed to convey that we understand the other person. Active listening and empathy is a prerequisite before any other intervention. If we have failed to convey to another person that we understand them, our efforts to encourage them will only make them feel worse. Also, there are times when trying to cheer up another person is a potentially damaging practice. If the person is in a desperate situation, pretending that he is happier than his circumstances allow is something that generates a lot of rejection and a feeling of inadequacy. "If I am not well, I am doing something wrong" Participants should note that while support must be provided with no condition; it is important to explain that sympathy/cheering up could lead to the wrong message that support will be provided if the victim/survivor shows happiness, like a condition. These situations could make victims/survivors lose trust in the system and not feel comfortable looking for services.

	Next, the facilitator will start a group discussion - What are some of the verbal and non-verbal communication skills a provider should have? (PPT27 Slide 7), the facilitator will listen to the different ideas and comment, facilitating the discussion.. Then, making reference to the ideas already arose in the previous brainstorming exercise and complementing such, the facilitator will present some skills, both for face-to-face service delivery (that also requires attention to the body language) and some skills common for face to face and remote interactions, such as verbal messages, and active listening skills (PPT27 Slide 8) One of the most important concepts to transmit to participants is the need to validate the feelings/reactions of the victims/survivors and normalise them (e very clear that the reference is not to what happened to her, but to her feelings). Providers must gain the skills to show victims/survivors that they are having a normal reaction to an abnormal event and that all their emotional reactions are acceptable. The participants will be invited to share some ideas of proper validating statements to say, and then they will be offered some examples that they should use in their practice (PPT27 Slide 9). The participants will also be equipped with some examples of statements that could support the healing process for victims/survivors, these are very important to reduce the risk of revictimization (PPT27 Slide 10), as many victims/survivors have been exposed to many re-victimising experiences where people have questioned her. The facilitator will then look at Paraphrasing which encompasses the ability to say in own words what the victim/survivor has said and encourages sharing (PPT27 Slide 11). This technique is important to show the victims/survivors they are being listened to and understood, and at the same time it permits the providers to confirm that they are understanding well. . The facilitator will then cover the skills of Summarising (PPT27 Slide 12), emphasising their role in effective communication and understanding. Summarizing is a very useful technique to make the point and/or direct the conversation with a person who is talking a lot. Next, the facilitator will explore the Signs of Full Attention (PPT27 Slide 13). The facilitator will emphasise the importance of making eye contact with the victims/survivors and the importance of adapting to their cultural value systems.

	The facilitator will then discuss the significance of emotional distance and limitations to maintaining a supportive yet professional stance with the victim/survivor. (PPT27 Slide 14) The facilitator should inform the participants that: “It seems incompatible to have an emotional distance and to empathize. Empathy is the maximum form of emotional approach to the other person, that is why it seems that distance and limits are incompatible with such a human capacity. But to truly empathize with another person, we must put aside our own emotions, our learning history, and our worldview to really see the world from the other person's perspective. If we do not learn to establish an emotional distance with the person we are trying to help, we do not empathize. We project our emotions and perspectives onto the other person. In addition, without that distance, the frequent exercise of empathy generates personal wear and tear that ends up invalidating us for psychosocial support. It is important to learn to discriminate the limits between the lives of others and our own so that our performance is professional, effective and sustainable in the long term.” The facilitator will address the importance of avoiding aggressive expressions that lead to emotional invalidation. (PPT27 Slide 15) The facilitator will emphasise the importance of duty bearers providing services and communicating with victims/survivors without being influenced by their own lived experiences and/or personal values. To continue the session, the facilitator will alert on the risk that well intended expressions may result in the invalidation of the victims/survivors emotions, and thus creating harm. (PPT27 Slide 16) The facilitator will inform the participants that: The facilitator will focus more attention on the LIVES Approach which is a first line response to domestic violence victims/survivors and introduced at the beginning of the session. (PPT27 Slide 17) The acronym LIVES (Listen, Inquire, Validate, Enhance safety and Support) discusses the first-line response to women experiencing violence adapted from psychological first aid - providing essential clinical care for victims/survivors. To culminate the session, the facilitator will then lead the participants to a Role play Exercise - Activity Exercise 5 (PPT27 Slide 18). This exercise will allow participants to put in practice all the survivor-centred communication skills that were presented, using simulated scenarios.
--	--

	The facilitator will encourage feedback and reflection post-exercise and thank the participants for their willingness to participate and attention.
Activity Exercise 1 Group Discussion “Communication is a healing tool”	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to engage the participants on critical thinking on communication as a tool for healing. Instructions given by Facilitators: The participants will be led into a group discussion on the statement - “Communication is a healing tool”. (PPT27 Slide 3) The facilitator will show the slide and ask the participants what they think about the statement. The participants will be asked what their thoughts are. Why should this be true? Can communication harm? Instruction: show the slide and ask: The facilitator will discuss with the participants: - the importance communication has on victims/survivors’ healing process - the fact that with some basic elements of communication they can participate on that process
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1: Group Discussion “Communication is a healing tool”	Why could communication be a tool for healing? And if that’s so, what can make communication potentially harmful? How could we do harm to a victim/survivor in a first contact with her?
Activity Exercise 2 Video Clip - Empathy	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to expose the participants to a look on elements of the concept of empathy. Instructions given by Facilitators: (PPT27 Slide ?) The facilitator will play the video clip on empathy: Brené Brown - El poder de la empatía (corto animado RSA.org)https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AyInqn_Hw_E (English with Spanish subtitles) At the end of the video the participants will be asked to reflect on the main points of the video and share their thoughts.

Guiding Questions for Exercise 2: Video Clip - Empathy	What are things to do/say and to avoid/not to say when providing support to a victim/survivor of GBV? What are the benefits of a survivor-centred empathic validating communication versus judgemental, sympathetic or assessing communication? How can I create a safe and non-judgmental environment for victims/survivors to share their experiences?
Activity Exercise 3: Group Discussion “Verbal and Nonverbal communication skills”	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to critically think about the importance of verbal and nonverbal communication skills and the type of skills a provider would need. Instructions given by Facilitators: Group Discussion- What are some of the verbal and nonverbal communication skills a provider should have? (PPT27 Slide 7)
Activity Exercise 4: Role Play Exercise Active Listening (20’)	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of this exercise is to have the participants engage in active listening and display empathy to a domestic violence situation. Instructions given by Facilitators: (PPT27 Slide 18) The facilitator will divide the participants into groups. Each group should be composed of three participants who will fulfil the roles of: 1) Presenting the situation, 2) listener, 3) observer (participants rotate in assuming the different roles) One participant presents a challenging situation in her life (not related to violence) and take about 5 minutes to describe it to her partner - The listener should practise empathy and active listening (using techniques like paraphrasing, healing statements, summarizing, signs of full attention) - The person who presented the situation (and an observer) should present to the rest of the group. -A debriefing session should take place after to garner collective feedback.

Guiding Questions for Exercise 4: Role Play Exercise Active Listening	• What did the partner do to show she was listening attentively to you? • What did she say that showed active listening? • What did your partner NOT do or say – both good and bad? (validating vs not validating emotions, healing statements) • Was the summarization and the paraphrasing helpful? • How did you feel afterwards?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: The victim/survivor's needs, wishes, safety, confidentiality, respect and no discrimination, must be at the of all interactions in gender-based violence situations. Listen without judgement, validate the victims/survivors' feelings, and show empathy. Respect the victim/survivor's choices and confidentiality'. Recognize and respond to the victim/survivor in a way to validate their feelings in your communication.

Unit 8 – Responding to Domestic Violence

TOPIC: Early Warning Alert and Response System (EWARS)

SUB-TOPICS	Contextualising EWARS Guiding principles of the EWARS Roles and Functions of EWARS Monitoring and Warning Service of the EWARS Use of information to design effective responses
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Identify the main actors in the EWARS Describe the guiding principles of the EWARS Apply the principles of the EWARS in risk reduction and violence occurrence Use information generated by multiple stakeholders, police and other agencies, NGOs, CBOs in the parish/division
Competencies:	Understanding of Domestic Violence: Participants should develop a deep understanding of what constitutes domestic violence, including its different forms (physical, emotional, financial, etc.), and its impact on victims. EWRS Knowledge: Teach participants how the EWRS works, its components, and how it can be applied in the context of domestic violence. Effective Communication: Develop skills for effective communication with domestic violence victim/survivors and other relevant stakeholders. Safety Assessment: Train participants in conducting safety assessments for victims/survivors and identifying warning signs. Crisis Intervention: Equip participants with the ability to respond appropriately in crisis situations, including de-escalation techniques and how to involve law enforcement or other necessary agencies. Cultural Competence: Promote cultural sensitivity and an understanding of how domestic violence can affect different communities. Documentation and Reporting: Teach participants how to properly document incidents, maintain confidentiality, and report to the relevant authorities. Empathy and Compassion: Foster a compassionate and empathetic approach towards domestic violence victims/survivors.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture Presentation with powerpoint presentation Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled “PPT20 -Early Warning and Response System for Violence Prevention - UNDP” Projector
Handouts:	Not Applicable
Session Content

	providing an overview of the training objectives. The facilitator will present the definition and purpose of EWARS, as displayed on PPT20 Slide 11. The facilitator will engage the participants in a discussion on the importance of violence prevention at the macro level. The facilitator will then delve into the historical background of Early Warning Systems, elaborating on this topic with the aid of PPT20 Slides 12 and 13. The facilitator will guide the participants through an examination of the Four general models of Early Warning Systems, as displayed on PPT20 Slide 14. After this, the facilitator will move on to the details of the components of the EWARS Cycle, as outlined on PPT20 Slide 15. The facilitator will emphasise the practical applications of EWARS in violence prevention and conflict resolution, specifically as presented on PPT20 Slide 16. The facilitator will underscore the significance of Early Warning and Response Systems (EWRS) as a pivotal tool within the realm of violence prevention, management, and resolution and encourage participants to actively participate in a discussion concerning the specific settings where EWRS can be effectively employed. Reiterate that EWRS is like a custom-made suit utilising PPT20 Slide 17 The facilitator will allocate time for participants to ask questions or share their perspectives on the subject matter. PPT20 Slide 18. The participants will then explore guiding questions for designing an EWRS. PPT20 Slides 22-24. To culminate the session, the facilitator will give the participants a group exercise (Activity Exercise 1) then recap the key takeaways from the lesson and provide additional resources or references for further exploration.
Activity Exercise 1 Case Study	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of the case study exercise is to allow participants to ascertain the best ways to utilise an EWRS system for domestic violence situations.

	Instructions given by Facilitators: Using domestic violence data in a rural area, the participants in small groups will discover how the EWRS system could be useful in early warning detection and ways in which proactive domestic violence interruption and response may occur. Each group will present their findings.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	What is domestic violence, and how does it manifest in various forms? What is the purpose of an EWRS, and how can it be utilised in cases of domestic violence? How can we assess the safety and risk level of domestic violence victims?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Early intervention is crucial to prevent further harm to the victim/survivor. Confidentiality and safety are paramount when dealing with domestic violence cases.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What are the legal and ethical considerations when dealing with domestic violence cases? How can we effectively communicate with victims/survivors and support them emotionally? What cultural factors should we consider when addressing domestic violence? How can we document and report incidents while maintaining confidentiality?

Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Cultural competence is essential for understanding the unique challenges faced by different communities. Collaboration among various stakeholders, including law enforcement, social services, and healthcare professionals, is key to effective response. Documentation and reporting are vital for accountability and providing evidence to support victims.

Unit 8 – Responding to Domestic Violence

TOPIC: Role of the DVICARE Centres

SUB-TOPICS	• Responding to Domestic Violence (DV) • Functions of the DVICARE Centres • Process of taking a referral case at the DVICARE Centres
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	• Understand the importance of DVICARE Centres in DV cases • Learn about the role and functions of Domestic Violence Intervention (DVI) Care Centres in Jamaica. • Examine the services and resources offered by DVICARE Centres • Identify best practices for collaboration between DVICARE Centres and other agencies • Practise effective referral processes to DVICARE Centres • Understand the role of confidentiality in collaboration of the DVICARE Centres and other stakeholders/agencies • Understand how these DVI Care Centres support and empower victims/survivors of domestic violence
Competencies:	• Role Comprehension: Explain the roles and functions of DVI Care Centres in addressing domestic violence. • Services Integration: Demonstrate an understanding of the range of services provided by DVI Care Centres and how they contribute to victim support and recovery. • Assessment and Evaluation: Assess the effectiveness and impact of DVI Care Centres in reducing domestic violence incidents and supporting victims. • Reporting and Documentation Proficiency: Accurately report and document domestic violence cases following established procedures.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture presentation with powerpoint Exercises – Utilisation of Scenarios/Case Studies Role Play Exercise Guided Discussions
Facilitator Materials	Powerpoint Slide Deck - Entitled - “ PPT25 - Role of the DVICARE Centre ” Case Studies; Role Play Exercises; Projector; Handouts
Handouts:	Risk Assessment Form
Session Content
Background and Lecture Presentation	Welcome the participants and introduce yourself as the facilitator. Start the session by introducing yourself and providing an overview of the training objectives of this topic. The Facilitator will explain the purpose of the session and share the learning objectives for the session. The session will officially begin with a discussion on the importance of DVICARE Centres in supporting domestic violence victims/survivors. The purpose and mission of DVICARE Centres will be explored through addressing each letter in the acronym - DV- ICARE (PPT25 Slide 2) The history of DVI Care Centres (PPT25 Slide 3) Real-life examples to highlight the impact of DVICARE Centres in providing safety, support, and resources may be used here. A guided discussion on the services and resources provided by DVICARE Centres will follow. A review of referral protocols and procedures for domestic violence victims/survivors seeking support from DVI Care Centres will then be explored (PPT 25 Slide 4) This discussion will include what action is taken when referrals are received (PPT 25 Slides 5 - 7)

	The Facilitator will then instruct the participants to conduct a practical exercise where participants role-play referral processes to DVICARE Centres and role-play scenarios where participants interact with representatives from DVICARE Centres. - (Activity 1) *The Facilitator should identify the most effective way to communicate and address the usual challenges that may arise in the referral process as well as confidentiality cultural sensitivity considerations when working with DVICARE Centres. After the role-play scenarios, hold a debrief session to discuss participants' experiences and insights. Encourage participants to share lessons learned and discuss strategies for further improvement. The activity debrief will be followed by the facilitator explaining how data is collected at DVICARE Centres (PPT25 Slide 8-9). The group of participants will be given a class question to ponder- “What is the most important goal in a situation of domestic violence?” (PPT25 Slide 10) The 5 Principles of DVI Care (PPT25 Slide 12-18) - Intervention; Counselling; Awareness; Response and Empathy will then be explored in detail. Case study activities (Activity 2) can be explored if time allows. Key takeaways from the session should be reiterated to culminate the session.
Activity Exercise 1 Role Play	Learning Objectives of Exercise: Role play exercises enhance participants' skills in understanding the services and referral processes Instructions given by Facilitators Conduct role play exercises where participants assume the roles of victims/survivors and staff members of the DVICARE Centres. Instruct participants to enact scenarios that involve both male and female victim/survivors seeking support and interacting with professionals from the DVICARE Centres. Facilitate group discussions after each role play to debrief and reflect on the experiences.

Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	Explore the significance of DVICARE Centres in supporting victims
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Proper referrals ensure victims/survivors receive timely and appropriate support from DVICARE Centres.
Activity Exercise 2 Case Study Exercise:	Learning Objective for Exercise: To analyse the impact of DVICARE Centres in assisting victims/survivors in selected case study. Instructions given by Facilitators: Divide participants into small groups. Assign each group a different case study involving domestic violence. Instruct them to discuss and analyse the role of the DVICARE Centre in each case. Each group presents their findings to the whole class.
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	Understanding the importance of maintaining victim/survivor confidentiality
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What are the range of services offered by DVICARE Centres?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Cultural sensitivity ensures DVICARE Centres cater to the diverse needs of domestic violence victims/survivors Ensuring confidentiality builds trust between DVICARE Centres and domestic violence victims/survivors Awareness of available resources in DVICARE Centres ensures effective

MODULE FOUR: RESPONSE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IN ACCORDANCE WITH NATIONAL POLICY FRAMEWORK AND INTERNATIONAL QUALITY STANDARDS

Unit 8 – Responding to Domestic Violence

TOPIC: Interviewing Techniques for Victims/Survivors of Domestic Violence

--	--	--

SUB-TOPICS	Managing Attitudes and Perceptions Interviewing Victims/Survivors, Perpetrators, Witnesses Interviewing Children as Victims/Survivors and Witnesses Conducting Domestic Violence investigations with evidence gathering techniques
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Understand the importance of sensitive and survivor-centred interviewing techniques for victims/survivors of domestic violence. Identify the unique challenges and barriers faced by victims/survivors of domestic violence during interviews. Outline the procedures to be followed when conducting interviews and collecting evidence in domestic violence cases Learn techniques for creating a safe and supportive environment for victims/survivors to share their experiences. Explore strategies for building rapport and trust with victims/survivors to facilitate open and honest communication. Understand the importance of active listening and validation when interviewing victims/survivors of domestic violence. Practice asking non-leading and open-ended questions to gather comprehensive and accurate information. Gain awareness of cultural considerations and linguistic accessibility when conducting interviews with diverse victims.
Competencies:	• Survivor-centred Approach: Ability to employ survivor-centred principles when interviewing victims/survivors of domestic violence, recognizing and responding to the potential impact of trauma on their responses and emotions. • Active Listening: Proficiency in actively listening to victims, demonstrating empathy and validating their experiences and feelings.

	• Communication Skills: Effective communication skills, including clear and compassionate language, when conducting interviews with victims. • Cultural Competence: Awareness and understanding of cultural differences and considerations when interviewing victims/survivors from diverse backgrounds. • Empathy and Sensitivity: Capacity to show empathy and sensitivity towards victims, creating a safe space for them to share their experiences. • Interviewing Techniques: Skill in using non-leading and open-ended questioning techniques to gather accurate and comprehensive information from victims. • Rapport Building: Ability to build rapport and establish trust with victims/survivors to facilitate effective communication during the interview process. • Ethical Conduct: Knowledge and adherence to ethical guidelines when conducting interviews with victims/survivors of domestic violence, respecting their autonomy, confidentiality, and consent. • Proficiency in accurately and objectively documenting information obtained during interviews for legal and support services • Problem solving

Session Content
Background and Lecture Presentation	The facilitator will start the session by introducing the topic and providing participants with an overview of the training objectives. The session will begin with the facilitator discussing the Tips for when domestic violence is identified (PPT24 Slides 2-3) A group discussion will be conducted to identify challenges and strategies for effectively interviewing victims/survivors in such sensitive situations. As the session progresses, the facilitator will lead the discussion on identifying domestic violence (PPT24 Slides 4-5) and the challenges for the survivor (PPT Slides 6-7). The facilitator will continue the session with exploring Interviewing the Survivor (PPT Slides 8-9) which entail the key questions to ask and the significance of skilled interviewing techniques in domestic violence cases such as effective communication and active listening. For Child-focused questions, the facilitator will discuss the complexities of interviewing domestic violence victims, including children. Active listening. Empathy. The facilitator may also explore DVI Care Booklet with the participants for more key interviewing tips. The session will then break for a role play exercise with all participants - Activity Exercise 1. After summarising the key takeaways from the session and reviewing the learning objectives. Provide an opportunity for participants to ask questions and seek clarification. Thank the participants for their active engagement and participation.

Activity Exercise 1 Role Play Exercise	Learning Objective for Exercise: Role play exercises enhance participants' skills in utilising empathy and eliciting trust within interview situations in relation to domestic violence cases. Open and non-judgmental communication is crucial in supporting victims/survivors Instructions given by Facilitators Conduct role play exercises where participants divided into small groups assume the roles of survivors, witnesses and police in domestic violence disputes. Instruct participants in groups of three persons to enact scenarios that involve seeking support, and the victim/survivors, perpetrators and witnesses are being interviewed by the police. Some of the groups may enact conducting interviews with child victims/survivors using suitable approaches. Group discussions will be required after each role play to debrief and reflect on the experiences. Participants may discuss strategies for handling challenging interview situations with professionalism and adaptability by introducing survivor-centred interviewing approaches and their significance in domestic violence. Each pair/ group assesses each other based on tips provided in session

Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	Reflect on the exercise and discuss the impact of insensitivity in interviewing children. What is the cycle of abuse, and how can we identify it in interviews? How can we ensure the safety of domestic violence victims/survivors during interviews? What are the cultural factors that may affect the interview process, and how can we address them effectively?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	How a victim/survivor is interviewed will vary based on level of trauma and socio environmental factors Understanding the unique challenges helps build rapport and trust with victims, fostering open communication. Survivor-centred approaches promote sensitivity and support for victims/survivors who have experienced traumatic events. Cultural sensitivity and appropriate use of interpreters ensure effective communication and understanding during interviews
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion/Reading	What are the legal and ethical considerations when interviewing victims/survivors of domestic violence? How can we apply survivor-centred principles in our interviews?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways:

--	--	--

	Effective interviewing is crucial for obtaining accurate information and supporting victims/survivors through the legal process. Always prioritise the safety of the victim/survivor and follow established safety protocols. Encourage students to seek supervision and support when dealing with the emotional toll of these interviews. Empathetic interviews create a safe space for victims/survivors to share their stories and seek assistance without judgement. Age-appropriate interviewing methods encourage children to communicate effectively and feel supported during interviews. Reference can be made to the JCF DVI Care Booklet for further reading.

MODULE FOUR: RESPONSE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IN ACCORDANCE WITH NATIONAL POLICY FRAMEWORK AND INTERNATIONAL QUALITY STANDARDS

Unit 8 – Responding to Domestic Violence

TOPIC: JCF Early Intervention System (EIS)

--	--	--

SUB-TOPICS	Definition of the Early Intervention System (EIS) in relation to the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) Role of the Supervisor in JCF Early Intervention System (EIS) Components of an Early Intervention System Methods and sources for collecting data for the EIS including use of force incidents, complaints, and behavioural indicators.
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Understand the definition of the Early Intervention System (EIS) and why it is important in policing. Discuss the use of the JCF Early Intervention System (EIS) in dealing with members of the police force who are victims/survivors and perpetrators of domestic violence. Discuss the role of the supervisor in the process of intervention for members of the police force Explore the legal and ethical considerations that guide the implementation of early intervention systems in law enforcement. Learn to identify risk factors and warning signs of potential issues in officer conduct, performance, or mental health. Develop the skills to collect and analyse relevant data, including officer performance metrics, citizen complaints, and incident reports. Understand the various intervention strategies and mechanisms that can be used to address identified issues, such as counselling, training, or reassignment. Learn how early intervention systems can improve community relations by addressing problematic behaviour and enhancing accountability
Competencies:	• Data Analysis and Interpretation: Proficiency in collecting and analysing data to identify trends, patterns, and potential issues in officer conduct and performance. • Communication Skills: Effective communication with officers, superiors, and other stakeholders in a clear and respectful manner. ● Crisis Management: Ability to assess risks and handle crises and urgent situations that may arise during the intervention process. ● Conflict Resolution: Skill in resolving conflicts and disputes among officers and with the public. ● Legal Knowledge: Familiarity with relevant laws, regulations, and policies governing policing and early intervention systems. ● Empathy and Counseling: Providing emotional support and counselling when necessary to help officers overcome personal and professional challenges. ● Community Engagement: Building and maintaining positive relationships between the police force and the community to gain their trust and cooperation. ● Accountability and Transparency: Ensuring that the early intervention process is transparent and accountable to the public and other stakeholders.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Guided Discussions Case Study Exercises Role Play Exercises
Facilitator Materials	Facilitator Notes; Case Studies; Annex: JCF Early Intervention System Policy and Standard Operating Procedures
Handouts:	Case Studies
Session Content
Background and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will commence the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training through explaining the objectives of the session, what participants can expect to learn, and the importance of their role in responding to domestic violence incidents. An introduction to Early Intervention Systems (EIS) in policing will be done by the facilitator asking the participants to share their understanding and familiarity with the concept of EIS. Early Intervention Systems (EIS) are critical for identifying and mitigating potential issues within police departments. The session will continue with an explanation of the historical context and the need for EIS especially in relation to the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF). The facilitator will then discuss the components of EIS and how they function which include operational benefits and intervention strategies. The session will continue with a discussion on how each component contributes to early intervention The facilitator will ask participants to brainstorm their ideas prior to the discussion. The facilitator will pause the session here for the participants to engage in Activity Exercise 1 - case study exercise. After the activity, the facilitator will explain the role of technology and data in Early Intervention Systems (EIS) and demonstrate the process of collecting, processing and utilising EIS data for early intervention. The session will continue to summarise the legal and ethical considerations and common challenges that may arise in implementing Early Intervention Systems (EIS) specifically in regards to the police force. The participants will then be engaged in a dialogue about the potential impact of Early Intervention Systems (EIS) on community relations and public trust and the role of police leadership in promoting EIS. The session will conclude with the discussion of the future of EIS in policing. *If time allows Activity Exercise 2 - Role Play can be done.

Activity Exercise 1 Case Study Exercise	Learning Objective for Exercise: The objective of this case study exercise is to apply the principles of Early Intervention Systems (EIS) to real-life scenarios. Instructions given by Facilitators: Present case studies that examples of EIS implementation within the police force.

	Participants divided into small groups, will analyse case study for the benefits, disadvantages and challenges/barriers associated with the implementation of EIS in the cases. Ask each group to identify potential indicators for intervention and create an action plan. Presentations will be made by each group to their peers.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	What are the advantages and disadvantages of EIS? What are the challenges and barriers to EIS implementation?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	The role of effective communication and collaboration between officers, supervisors, and Early Intervention System (EIS) administrators is very important to enhancing its efforts. There is a need for ongoing training and professional development in relation to effectively carrying out Early Intervention System (EIS). The significance of accurate and comprehensive documentation of incidents and interventions and reporting procedures for EIS data and outcomes.
Activity Exercise 2 Role Play Exercise	Learning Objectives of Exercise: Role play exercises enhance participants' skills in developing a deeper understanding of situations where EIS implementation is necessary. Instructions given by Facilitators Using their knowledge of EIS, assign roles to participants, including police officers and their supervisors. Create scenarios where EIS is utilised to address specific issues of domestic violence where in some cases the police officer is a victim of domestic violence or a perpetrator of domestic violence. The role play sessions will be facilitated where participants enact EIS processes and interactions. The facilitator will ensure a debrief after each role play to identify strengths and areas for improvement.

Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What is the role of police leadership in promoting EIS? What is the potential impact of EIS on community relations and public trust? What are the ethical considerations that should be considered when using Early Intervention System (EIS) data, including maintaining officer rights and civil liberties?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: The JCF's Early Intervention System is an approach to identifying members of the police force who may display tendencies of undesired behaviour and thereby allowing for timely intervention. Cultural competence and awareness in assessing officer behaviour will aid in reducing bias in EIS data collection and interpretation. Focus on improving the performance and behaviour of law enforcement officers to ensure public safety and uphold the integrity of the police force. Early intervention systems are designed to identify and address potential issues or red flags in an officer's conduct or performance before they escalate into more serious problems.

MODULE FOUR: RESPONSE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IN ACCORDANCE WITH NATIONAL POLICY FRAMEWORK AND INTERNATIONAL QUALITY STANDARDS

Unit 8 – Responding to Domestic Violence TOPIC: Safety Planning - Danger to Safety Protocol

--	--	--

Sub-Topics:	Definition of safety plan and its importance. Procedures if victim/survivor is leaving or staying Risk Assessment Role of DVICARE Centre in Safety Planning Roles of police and other actors in relation to safety planning
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	● Develop an understanding of Domestic Violence (DV) dynamics ● Understand the definition and importance of safety planning in domestic violence situations ● Identify key components of an effective safety plan for victims/survivors of domestic violence ● Explore strategies for assessing the unique safety risks and needs of individual victims/survivors through a risk assessment ● Gain knowledge of available resources and support services that can be incorporated into safety planning ● Learn techniques for involving victims/survivors in the safety planning process to promote their empowerment and autonomy. ● Understand the role of confidentiality and privacy in safety planning to protect victims/survivors from further harm ● Practice creating safety plans that are adaptable and responsive to changing circumstances. ● Gain awareness of the ethical/legal considerations and the required steps to initiate legal proceedings
Competencies:	● Proficiency in communicating safety planning options and recommendations to victims/survivors in a clear, compassionate, and non-judgmental manner. ● Skill in providing a survivor-centred approach to care when developing safety plans, considering the potential impact of trauma on survivors' decisions and responses. ● Ability to respond effectively to crisis situations and develop safety plans that prioritise immediate safety needs. ● Capacity to involve victims/survivors in the safety planning process, recognizing their agency and strengths in making decisions about their safety. ● Awareness and understanding of cultural factors that may influence safety planning for victims/survivors from diverse backgrounds. • Skill in collaborating with other professionals, agencies, and community organisations to enhance safety planning efforts and support victims/survivors effectively. • Knowledge and adherence to ethical guidelines when working with victims/survivors of domestic violence, respecting their autonomy and confidentiality. • Commitment to ongoing learning and staying informed about best practices and emerging research in safety planning for domestic violence survivors. • Ability to assess the safety risks faced by victims/survivors of domestic violence and tailor safety plans accordingly.

Session Length:	60 minutes to 120 minutes
Training Techniques:	Lecture presentation with powerpoint Case Study Exercise - CS15 - Mary Role Play Exercise Guided Discussion

Session Content
Lecture Presentation and Guided Discussion	To engage the participants, the facilitator may use an example of a simple domestic violence scenario to ask the participants the various ways it could be dealt with.

--	--	--

	The key elements of a safety plan will be discussed including physical safety; emotional well-being and financial security. The facilitator will then introduce the concept of safety planning in cases of domestic violence with the aid of presentation slides (PPT29 Slides 2 & 3) and also asking the participants about their awareness of the concept. The dynamics of domestic violence will be discussed including power and control tactics. The facilitator will continue the discussion by differentiating and discussing how a safety plan differs if the victim/survivor decides to stay in the abusive situation (PPT29 Slides 4-6) or if the survivor decides to leave the abusive situation (PPT29 Slide 7) or if they have already left the abusive situation. (PPT29 Slides 8-10) The importance of risk assessment (reminder of the definition may be done here) being done prior to the creation of a safety plan, to fully understand the level of danger faced by the survivor/s. (PPT29 Slides 11-13) A guided question may be utilised here to engage the participants in critical thinking. Question: At what point are risk assessments done? Following this, the factors to determine imminent risks (PPT29 Slides 14 & 15) should be discussed with the participants. This subtopic moves right into informing the participants of the protocols to be observed in moving a survivor from “danger to safety” (PPT29 Slide 16) Mention should be made here of the role of the police and the DVICARE Centre within the process. The presentation should be paused here for the Activity Exercise 1 (see below) In continuation a look at the legal framework such as the steps to initiate protection, restraining and occupational orders should be done. (PPT29 Slides 19 & 20) The lecture presentation part should continue with key reminders which include examples of safety planning strategies with real-life scenarios such as the importance of creating safe space for victim/survivor; reducing risk factors; documenting and managing evidence with confidentiality and securing important documents. (PPT29 Slide 21) The session will culminate with a video analysis and discussion on the domestic violence situation presented in Toxic Love (2023) https://youtu.be/H3zsMndqJ08?si=ioAvHf56vXEh-FMW (Activity Exercise 2) * Depending on the length of the session Activity Exercise 3 can be conducted also.

Activity Exercise 1 Case Study - Mary (PPT29 Slides 17 & 18)	Learning Objective for Exercise: To ascertain the steps (protocol) needed to be taken in order to move a victim/survivor from danger to safety Instructions given by Facilitators: The students (entire group or in small groups) will be instructed to read a case study/scenario of a domestic violence situation (Mary - PPT29 Slides 17- 18) or CS15 - Mary presented by the facilitator. 1. The students will then be asked to think about, using risk assessment tools, what steps should be utilised in helping the victim/survivor given in the case to move away from and deal with their situation of domestic violence. 2. Groups should be instructed to develop a safety plan to be done with the survivor of the given case study, considering the unique needs and the risks involved. 3. Encourage groups to share their safety plans and discuss the rationale behind their strategies.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	● What are the unique considerations in order to create a safety plan for this victim/survivor? ● When is the best time/ location or circumstance for the survivor to be moved from danger to safety?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	● A risk assessment of the appropriate time, location and circumstance must be carried out. ● Safety planning requires a tailored approach based on individual circumstances and needs ● Importance should be placed on the collaborative efforts of several stakeholders such as police, psychosocial services , health, legal and judiciary (Court System for protection order or criminal charges), security and protection, economic reintegration support and the DVI Care centre closest to victim/survivor.
Activity Exercise 2 Video Analysis	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of the participants to watch the video “Toxic Love” is to have a better understanding of the dynamics of a domestic violence relationship and the importance of safety plans. Instructions given by Facilitators The facilitator will play the youtube video - Toxic Love - Award Winning Domestic Violence Short Film (2023) [OfficialPrinceKev] https://youtu.be/H3zsMndqJ08?si=ioAvHf56vXEh-FMW After watching the video, the participants will engage in a discussion on how a safety plan would have helped the woman and child in this case.

Activity Exercise 3 Role Play Exercise: Seeking Support and Implementing Safety Plans *Role Play Exercises are up to the decision of the facilitator	Learning Objectives of Exercise: Role play exercises enhance participants' skills in seeking support and implementing safety plans effectively. Open and non-judgmental communication is crucial in supporting victims/survivors and helping them implement their plans. Instructions given by Facilitators: Conduct role play exercises where participants assume the roles of survivors, support providers, and service providers. Instruct participants to enact scenarios that involve seeking support, implementing safety plans and interacting with various professionals. Facilitate group discussions after each role play to debrief and reflect on the experiences.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	What if the victim/survivor wants to stay in the domestic violence situation? (Reminder of elements and utilisation of Power and Control by perpetrator discussed in Unit 1) Based on what they have learnt, how is the best way to ascertain the level of danger the victim/survivor is currently in? (Discussion of Risk Assessment is done here) How important is the Essential Services Package to helping the victim/survivor? (Discussion of the elements of the Essential Service Package for Victims/Survivors and reminder of the Referral Pathway)
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: • Safety Planning is a crucial tool for empowering victims/survivors of domestic violence and assisting them in regaining control of their lives. • Safety planning requires a tailored approach based on individual circumstances and needs. • There must be coordinated and collaborative efforts by multiple stakeholders and agencies to ensure the success of safety planning outcomes. • It is important for the survivor to be equipped with preparation tips on important things they should and should not do as they get ready to leave their situations.

Unit 9 - Interdisciplinary Support to Victims/Survivors and Agencies Networking

Topic: Referral Pathway and Referral Protocols for the Continuum of Care

Su-Topics:	The multi-sectoral response model and the expected role of each sector Key components of the Survivor-Centred Continuum of Care in the Jamaican context Tools to support survivors/victims of GBV: Referral Pathway for providers trained in GBV proper response and Constant Companion for non trained persons. The continuum of care of survivors/victims of GBV and the importance of implementing the phased referral protocols
Preparation and General Information
Learning Objectives	Emphasise the importance of a well coordinated response to GBV by providers of the same and of different sectors. Present two tools for providers to facilitate referrals: the referral pathway for GBV specialists and the Constant Companion for non-specialists. Emphasise the Do and DON'Ts when someone discloses to be subject to violence. Understand the components of a referral pathway and being able to transmit the appropriate information to the survivors/victims permitting them to make informed decisions. Describe the stages and key players involved in the referral process. Demonstrate effective communication and partnership among stakeholders within the referral pathway to best assist a victim/survivor of gender-based violence. Understand the concept of continuum of care for survivors/victims and its importance in empowering and supporting the survivors/victims in their healing process. Understand the importance to identify providers trained in the response to GBV in each of the sector and to coordinate in order to guarantee quality

Session Content
Lecture Presentation and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will begin by welcoming the participants and briefly introducing the training topic by setting the context and objectives of the session. The facilitator will proceed to (PPT28 Slide 2) to begin the session with Activity Exercise 1- Referral String Exercise. The facilitator will ask participants to pay attention to the dynamics, the experience lived by the different participants and be ready for a discussion afterward. (See Activity Exercise 1 and the accompanying materials in the toolkit.) The facilitator will then move to (PPT28 Slide 3) to discuss the multi-sectoral response model and highlight its advantages/pros. Participants should be encouraged to engage in a conversation about the importance of accessing excellent quality services. The facilitator should let the participants know that “the survivor-centred approach has to be linked with a multi-sectoral response model, which you also may have heard of. Essentially, it refers to holistic, inter-organizational, inter-agency, interdisciplinary efforts that promote participation and collaboration across key sectors that respond to GBV, including (but NOT LIMITED To) life-saving services, such as: - 1. Healthcare: where GBV survivors, including women, girls, boys and men, access quality, life-saving healthcare services, with an emphasis on clinical management of rape. GBV survivors access quality” To continue the session, the facilitator will discuss the Sectoral Assistance for Survivors of GBV (PPT28 Slide 4). The facilitator will emphasize that all providers should inform the survivors/victims on the services they could receive from the different sectors, for this it is important that the providers know which are the services provided by the health sector (emphasizing the need for a timely response in cases of sexual assault), justice sector, social services sector/case management and psychosocial support and the police/security sector. ” The facilitator will then explore the key components of a Survivor-Centred Continuum of Care in the Jamaica Context (PPT28 Slide 5) presenting the different services offered by the different Jamaican institutions. Next, the facilitator will introduce the two main tools to support a victim/survivor of Gender-Based Violence (GBV) (PPT28 Slide 6) which are the GBV Referral Pathway for GBV Specialists and the Constant Companion for non-specialists. The facilitator will also mention the importance of Helplines and DVICARE Centres. With the support of (PPT28 Slide 7) the facilitator will present a valuable tool for individuals who are not GBV specialists on how to provide survivor centred support when someone a victim/survivor discloses their abusive situation to them with the use of the Constant Companion. The presentation will focus on the essential DOs and DONT'S (best practices) To support this discussion, the facilitator will proceed to review a sample of the UNFPA Constant Companion (PPT28 Slide 8). This will include a discussion with the participants and an explanation of how to use it. To continue, the facilitator will explore the immediate response if gender-based violence (GBV) is reported on a helpline/hotline which includes practising the survivor-centred approach guided by important best practices (Do's and don'ts). (PPT28 Slide 9). The facilitator will guide the discussion through the process from immediate response if informed consent is given to if there are no urgent health or safety needs. The facilitator will then progress to the concept of GBV Referral Pathway (PPT28 Slides 10-11). The facilitator will share with the participants that the To continue the session, the facilitator will move to (PPT28 Slide 12) to explain the continuum of care for survivors of GBV, placing emphasis on its significance in providing comprehensive support. The facilitator will show the link here to the multi-sectoral response model using the survivor-centred approach. The facilitator will also emphasise the need for the consent of the survivor for the referrals, since the survivor must always be at the centre of the decision. The facilitator will explain that thanks to the referral pathway and the coordination among different sectors, survivors are provided with a "continuum of care". (PPT28 Slide 11) Next, the participants will be led through the Key Documents to Guarantee the Continuum of Care (PPT28 Slide 12). These include the definition and scope of the Interagency MOU (PPT28 Slide 13-14) and Objectives (PPT28 Slide 15) and the Phased Referral Protocol (PPT28 Slide 16) and its role in effective referrals. After asking the participants if they have any queries, the facilitator will then transition the session to discussing the Key Principles for Referral

	Pathways (PPT28 Slide 17). This will lead into an introduction to the concept of Warm Referrals (PPT28 Slide 18) and How to Provide Warm Referral implementation (PPT28 Slide 19). The facilitator will make a special note to the participants that “Warm referrals help reduce barriers. A warm referral conveys knowledge of the services provided, assures the patient of a warm reception by the referral service provider and affirms that the service will meet the woman’s expressed need to help her overcome barriers to referral – for example, lack of transport or of childcare.” The facilitator will then lead the participants to discuss what is the meaning of an Enhanced Coordination (PPT28 Slides 20-21) and the importance of the victim/survivor’s Verbal Informed Consent when it relates to the referral process. (PPT28 Slide 22) The facilitator will show a sample of the process of identification of gender-based violence (PPT28 Slide 23), that will also be utilised in Activity Exercise 2. To conclude the session, the facilitator will lead the participants in a group activity - Activity Exercise 2 - Case Study Jennifer (PPT28 Slide 24). This will be followed by a recap of the main points highlighted in the session and open the floor to questions and answers.
Activity Exercise 1 Referral String Exercise (PPT28 Slide 1)	Learning Objective for Exercise: (These instructions of the exercise are taken from the UNFPA 2023 CMR package.) ● Increase awareness of and empathy for the difficulties women who experience violence face when seeking support. ● Highlight how gender norms can affect women’s ability to seek help and access care. ● Encourage participants to think about what they can do as providers to provide an empathetic response to survivors of violence The facilitator will utilise materials in TOOLKIT provided: a. RG3a - Referral_String_Character_Cards-ES

	b. RG3b - Referral_String_Facilitator's_Note-ES Instructions for Facilitator: • Ensure you prepared -in advance- a knitting string • Ask the participants to volunteer to play the characters of the referral string exercise • Assign one character to each volunteer, instruct them to read their roles • Start the role play by the main Character Kamile telling her story to her sister who refer her to the community leader, eventually starting many steps of referral -from one person to another-and telling her story many times to many people • While referring Kamile to service providers a string (handed for the first time by Kamile) should indicate the referral paths. You will end up with a nest of threads representing a complicated referral pathway Note to the facilitator: This exercise is designed for 10 participants, but other actors can be added and it can be contextualised to different scenarios.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	These instructions of the exercise are taken from the UNFPA 2023 CMR package. 1. Ask ○ Kamile, how she felt ○ Other characters, how they felt ○ Observers, how they felt 2. Ask the participants: • How do you feel about the survivor's options for help and about the choices she was able to make and the process to get the support? ○ Probe: Was she always free to make the decision and access the services? ○ Probe: How much power did she have?

	○ Probe: what do you feel about Kamile telling her story to many people and the complicated referral process? 2. What made it difficult for the survivor to reveal her experience of violence? 3. Do you think we respect the guiding principles of dealing with GBV survivors? 4. Other comments on the exercise? Do you think something similar is happening in reality in Jamaica?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	These instructions of the exercise are taken from the UNFPA 2023 CMR package. ● Referral string exercise illustrates the challenging decisions that women face in handling violence and how this is connected to how survivors respond to them, the information they provide and how the referral mechanism is put in place. ● Women often have very few, if any, options for seeking support or escaping from violent situations. Many factors may prevent a woman from getting needed help from different sectors, including limited information, limited support, limited empathy. ● Although it is important to provide the needed services in one centre to minimise traumatization and improve privacy, confidentiality and safety of the survivor, however, this is not available in most settings. It is crucial therefore to develop a referral pathway with a partnership among service providers that respect and respond to guiding principles and guarantee a continuum of care reducing retelling the story and revictimization, and not leaving all the burden on the survivors but supporting them in the process of healing and recovery .
Activity Exercise 2 Case Study - Jennifer (PPT28 Slides 22-23)	Learning Objectives of Exercise: The objective of the exercise is to analyse the case study and identify what possible services could be needed by the victim/survivor . Instructions given by Facilitators: The facilitator will allow the participants to read through the Case Study Jennifer (PPT28 Slide 23) After reading the scenario they will create a flowchart similar to the one in (PPT28 Slide 22) identifying the possible referrals, prioritising them, and defining when the consent of the victim/survivor is needed.

	This case study can also be found in TOOLKIT as CS11 - Case Study - Jennifer . For variety other recommended case studies for this exercise includes: CS12 - Case Study -
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How can effective communication improve the referral and care coordination process? What are the benefits of a well-established continuum of care for victims/survivors? What challenges can arise during the referral process, and how can they be addressed?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Effective communication is the cornerstone of successful referrals and care coordination. Victims/Survivors should always be at the centre of the decision-making related to their healing process. Understanding the referral pathway, its actors and the services they provide, is crucial for delivering quality care. Providers must put the victims/survivors in the condition to make an informed decision about their process, by providing them with the possible services they can access, without providing advice and respecting their decisions. Providers must know trained providers of the other sectors to guarantee warm referral when needed and agreed by the survivors. Continuity of care leads to improved patient outcomes and satisfaction. Challenges in referrals and care coordination can be overcome through collaboration and problem-solving.

Session Content
Lecture Presentation and Guided Discussion	The facilitator will start the session by introducing themselves and providing an overview of the training objectives of session (PPT30 Slide 2) The session will begin with a discussion of what is Gender-Based Violence with emphasis of the UN definition and the working definition to be used for the session (PPT30 Slide 3) The session will continue with the facilitator explaining why it is important to respond to Gender- Based Violence (GBV) institutionally? (PPT30 Slide 4) The Facilitator may pause here to ask if the participants have any queries. An exploration of the statistics of Gender-Based Violence globally and then with specific reference to Jamaica and its implications. (PPT30 Slides 5 - 9). Statistics from the World Health Organisation (WHO), Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) , Child Protection and Family Services Agency (CPSFA) and the Office of Child’s Registry (OCR) will also be discussed by the facilitator. Emphasis is to be placed on statistics from spousal and sexually related crimes/abuses. The facilitator will discuss the importance of statistics review in dealing with GBV will be further emphasis on information from the Women’s Health Survey (2016) (PPT30 Slide 10) The Situation of GBV (PPT30 Slide 11) should be explored next to give way to the discussion on the Role of Bureau of Gender Affairs (BGA) (PPT30 Slide 12) and its main functions (PPT30 Slide 13). The facilitator will then allow the participants to engage in Activity Exercise 1 - Critical thinking exercise. The Facilitator will continue the lecture presentation after the exercise with an explanation on local policy and legislative commitments of the BGA. (PPT30 Slide 14) Special mention will be made on the National Strategic Action Plan to Eliminate Gender-Based Violence. The session will culminate with the Role Play Exercise - Activity Exercise 2.
Activity Exercise 1 Critical Thinking Exercise	Learning Objective for Exercise: To critically analyse functions of the Bureau of Gender Affairs, Instructions given by Facilitators: Each participant will choose one function of the list presented to use five to ten minutes to think of and list ways in which the function chosen relates to assisting the victims/survivors of domestic violence incidents or domestic violence prevalence in Jamaica.

Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	How does each specific function of the Bureau of Gender Affairs (BGA) assist the victims/survivors of the BGA?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	The Bureau of Women's Affairs in Jamaica plays a critical role in advancing the rights of women and that gender equality remains a central focus of government policies and programs. It conducts research and collects data on issues related to women's rights and gender equality to inform policy decisions and program development such as those that deal with gender-based violence. The Bureau plays a crucial role in the development and implementation of policies and programs aimed at addressing gender disparities and promoting women's rights.
Activity Exercise 2 Role Play Exercise: Exploration of the Men's Desk at the BGA * Role Play topic/focus is based on decision of facilitator	Learning Objectives of Exercise: Role play exercises enhance participants' skills in victims/survivors seeking support and understanding the role of the BGA in tackling Gender-Based Violence. Instructions given by Facilitators: Conduct role play exercises where participants assume the roles of male victim/survivors and male and female staff of the Bureau of Gender Affairs (BGA) Male Desk. This can be done in small groups or pairs. Instruct participants to enact scenarios that involve seeking support, the interview process and referrals. Facilitate group discussions after each role play to debrief and reflect on the experiences. *Emphasis in discussions should be placed on the difference between assisting male and female victim/survivors and possible challenges that may arise.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	Based on what the participants have learnt, what are the best ways to approach male victim/survivors of domestic violence? (Discussion of managing attitudes and perceptions is done here)
Wrap- Up/ Key	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points

Messages	and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: The Bureau of Gender Affairs (BGA) plays a crucial role in the development and implementation of policies and programs aimed at addressing gender disparities and promoting women's rights. One of the BGA's primary functions is to mainstream gender perspectives into various government policies and programs to ensure that they consider and address the specific needs and challenges faced by women. BGA plays a significant role in efforts to combat violence against women in Jamaica, including domestic violence and sexual harassment. The BGA supports victims/survivors and raises awareness about these issues. BGA collaborates with other government agencies, international agencies, NGOs, and civil society organisations to achieve its goals and objectives.

Session Content
Background and Lecture presentation	Start the session by introducing yourself and providing an overview of the training objectives. To open the session, a discussion on what is Violence Prevention (PPT31 Slide 2).and the types of violence (PPT31 Slide 3). The facilitator will then embark on a discussion on what is Domestic Violence (PPT31 Slides 4-5) and the Role of the Health Sector in dealing with domestic violence incidents. (PPT31 Slide 6 -7) The facilitator will then pause to ask the participants if they have any queries on what was discussed so far. The session will continue with a discussion of the delivery of Health Services currently being offered. (PPT31 Slide 8) The participants will continue with exploring the Government and Society Approach (PPT31 Slide 9) which is a collaborative approach with other agencies and the Survivor-Centred Approach (PPT31 Slide 10) which looks at the guiding principles to gender-based violence. The session will continue with an exploration of the definition of Continuum of Care from a Health Care Perspective (PPT31 Slide 11-13). The facilitator will then introduce the participants to the Referral Pathway for Victims/Survivors of Gender Based Violence Map (PPT31 Slide 14) Standards and policies of the Ministry of Health and Wellness (MoHW) (PPT31 Slide 15) and the Essential Services for Domestic Violence and Gender-Based Violence (PPT31 Slide 16) will be introduced next by the facilitator and discussed by the participants. The facilitator will move next to discussing the Health Services Psycho-Social & Support Services available by government and NGOs. (PPT31 Slide 17) The facilitator will pause the session to allow for a group activity - Activity Exercise 1. The session will continue after the activity looking at the following topics: • Primary Health Care and the Context of the Wider Health System, Community Mobilization and Inter-Sectoral Action (PPT31 Slide 18) • Intervention in relation to Mental Health and Psycho-Social Support Pyramid (Interview in Emergencies) (PPT31 Slide 19) • Pathway for the Management of the Survivors of Gender-Based Violence(GBV)/Domestic Violence (DV) (PPT31 Slide 20) • MoHW's three-phased approach to GBV help-seeking and referral (Referral Pathway) - (PPT31 Slide 21) The session will culminate with a discussion on the key take home points, Conclusion (PPT31 Slide 22) and references (PPT31 Slide 25)

Activity Exercise 1 Case Study Exercise	Learning Objective for Exercise: The aim of the case study is to discover the role of the health ministry in domestic violence situations. Instructions given by Facilitators: Begin the exercise by providing a brief overview of the importance of addressing domestic violence from a public health perspective. Emphasise the role of the Ministry of Health in this context.

	Present the participants with one or more case studies related to domestic violence situations. These case studies should include information about victims, perpetrators, healthcare professionals, and community resources. The scenarios should be realistic and diverse, covering various aspects of domestic violence, such as physical, emotional, and financial abuse. Allow participants to ask questions or share their thoughts and insights.
Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	What is the definition of domestic violence, and what forms does it take? What are the key roles and responsibilities of the Ministry of Health and Wellness in domestic violence situations? How can healthcare professionals identify signs of domestic violence in patients? What legal and policy frameworks are in place to address domestic violence, and how do they guide the Ministry's actions?
Take-Away Points from Exercise:	The Ministry of Health and Wellness is committed to providing support and resources to survivors of domestic violence.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	How can we collaborate with other agencies and organisations to provide comprehensive support to victims/survivors of domestic violence? What strategies can be employed to raise awareness and prevent domestic violence at the community level? How can we ensure our interventions are culturally sensitive and tailored to the needs of various populations?
Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways:

--	--	--

	Domestic violence is a public health issue that affects individuals and communities. Recognizing the signs of domestic violence and responding appropriately is crucial for healthcare professionals. Collaboration of the Ministry of Health and Wellness with law enforcement, social services, and NGOs is essential in addressing domestic violence effectively.

	providing an overview of the training objectives of the session. The participants will then be engaged by the facilitator by discussing the definition of domestic violence (PPT 19 Slide 3) and how the concept is not gender specific. (PPT 19 Slide 4). The session will continue with the facilitator explaining the tenets of the law on domestic violence - the Domestic Violence Act of 1996 (PPT 19 Slides 5-7) The Facilitator may pause here to ask if the participants have any queries on what has been discussed so far. The facilitator will then explain that the nature of the incidents of domestic violence being referred to in the Court will determine the orders under the Domestic Violence Act that can be applied for by the victims/survivors (Protection Order and Occupation) (PPT 19 Slides 8-13). An emphasis should be placed here by the facilitator on the factors which may satisfy the granting of each order. The facilitator will inform the participants that: The victim/survivor does not need to go to the police in order to go to Court. The victim/survivor can go straight to court in order to seek a protection order. However it is recommended that a report is filed at the nearest police station. A medical form can also be ascertained by the police if necessary and can be utilised in court proceedings. The facilitator will emphasise that in order to commence the process, The victim/survivor will report the incident to the police, then fill out a written affidavit form outlining all domestic violence incidents during the specified period which should be submitted to the court in order to apply for an order. The court will then review the form and evidence and consider an outcome. The court will grant a temporary protection order (interim order) or a summons issued for the perpetrator if the court is satisfied. The protection order is given for a specific period which is determined by the court. This time period may vary according to circumstance. The Facilitator will continue the lecture presentation with an explanation on the Ancillary Order where an Occupation Order has been granted. (PPT 19 Slide 14) The lecture presentation will continue with an exploration of the subtopics applying for ex-parte applications for occupation orders (PPT 19 Slides 15-17) and other orders than can be made (PPT 19 Slide 18).

	The participants should then be engaged in dialogue about who can apply to the courts for relevant Orders in relation to domestic violence. (PPT 19 Slides 19-24) Specific considerations such as what happens if the applicant is married (PPT Slide 25-26) It is important for the facilitator to divulge the following information to the participants: If the victim/survivor is married, the application for an order can be carried out at either the Resident Magistrate Court or the Supreme Court. If the application is carried out at the Resident Magistrate's Court, it can only be done under the Domestic Violence Act as the Resident Magistrate's Court has no jurisdiction under the Matrimonial Causes Act (1989, Amended 2005). If the application is carried out at the Supreme Court, it can only be done under the Matrimonial Causes Act as the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction under the Domestic Violence Act. The facilitator will continue the discussion with 'What does the order entail?' (PPT 19 Slide 27). The facilitator will then move to explaining what happens if the respondent fails to obey the order? (PPT 19 Slide 28-32) and what are the circumstances if a hearing is necessary or if criminal charges are necessary (PPT 19 Slides 33-34). The session will culminate with the discussion on domestic violence and community policing (Slides 35 -36) and then the breakout into the group activity (Activity 1 - Case Study Exercise) Instructions given below. *If time allows the Role Play Exercise - Activity 2 can also be conducted.
Activity Exercise 1 Case Study Exercise	Learning Objective for Exercise: To critically analyse the judicial offerings of the Court system to assist victims/survivors of domestic violence. Instructions given by Facilitators: Each participant or small group will analyse a case study based on a real or fictional domestic violence scenario. Include details about the individuals involved, their backgrounds, the nature of the abuse, and any legal proceedings. Distribute the case study to participants in advance to give them time to review it. During the exercise, gather participants into groups or pairs and ask them to discuss the case study. Encourage them to consider the guiding questions below. After the group discussions, the participants will come together in order to engage in a debrief session. Encourage participants to share their insights and conclusions about the case. Emphasis should be placed on discussing the complexities and difficulties in addressing domestic violence through the court system.

Guiding Questions for Exercise 1:	What are the key issues in this case? What legal actions have been taken, if any? How do you think the court should handle this case? What are the potential challenges for both the victim and the legal system in cases like this?
Take-Away Point from Exercise:	Legal professionals must be well-informed about the unique challenges in domestic violence cases and legal orders that can be applied for.
Activity Exercise 2 Role Play Exercise: Exploration of the referral and court proceedings in domestic violence situations * Role Play topic/focus is based on decision of facilitator	Learning Objectives of Exercise: Role play exercises enhance participants' skills in victims/survivors seeking support and understanding real-life situations and help participants practise responding to domestic violence cases within a court or legal context. Instructions given by Facilitators: Conduct role play exercises where participants will be placed in small groups and each participant assigned a scenario and different roles to play, such as a judge, attorney, victim/survivor, perpetrator, and other relevant stakeholders. Ensure the scenarios are realistic and challenging. Make sure they have time to familiarise themselves with their roles and any background information. The Facilitator will provide a brief introduction to the scenario. Encourage participants to act out their roles authentically, taking into account the dynamics of domestic violence cases they have been given and the important information they have learned in the session. After each role play scenario, the facilitator will lead a debriefing session where participants can discuss their experiences, challenges they faced, and strategies they used to address the situation.
Sample Guiding Questions for further Discussion	Based on what the participants have learnt, what are the best ways to approach and guide the victims/survivors of domestic violence in seeking legal redress? (Discussion of managing attitudes and perceptions is done

Wrap- Up/ Key Messages	The session will be culminated by reminding participants of key points and if they have any questions or any point to seek clarification on. Key Messages/Takeaways: Effective communication and empathy are essential when dealing with victims/survivors of domestic violence especially in relation to the Court System. Collaboration among different stakeholders such as legal professionals, is crucial for the best outcome for victims/survivors. Victim safety and well-being should always be the top priority in assisting victims/survivors in the referral process.
