Human Resource Development Policy Document

INTRODUCTION

The Jamaica Constabulary Force Human Resource Division recognizes that the competence of its human capital plays a pivotal role in the achievement of its objectives. In order to place the Division in a competitive advantage, it is necessary for us to strategically invest in the education, training and skills development of our human resources.

This policy intends to facilitate the achievement of the following outcomes:

- To implement the Organization's vision of a competent workforce that continuously meets productivity and customer service targets.
- To support and promote the skills training and development of its staff as a key-contributing factor in the overall development of the Organisation's mandate.
We believe that investing in our people, produces positive benefits for our employees and our stakeholders. Competency Framework is at Appendix 1.
- Promulgation of flexible policies and strategic Government-wide advice and guidance to implement systems to support employee learning and development for managers and executives, and leadership employee engagement strategies.

The Human Resource Development Unit is fully committed to the structured and systematic training and development of all employees on an ongoing basis to enable them to perform their duties effectively and efficiently. Training and developmental activities will be geared at equipping staff with the requisite knowledge, skills, abilities and aptitude to enable the achievement of the strategic priorities of the Division and the wider organization we serve.

Human Resource Development Policy Document

1. PURPOSE OF POLICY

The purpose of the Training Policy is to provide a framework and guidelines for comprehensive training and development for all civilians within the Jamaica Constabulary Force.

This policy is intended to facilitate the following:

-  Drive the achievement of the organization's vision through the development and sustenance of a competent workforce
-  Offer employees opportunities for growth and development
-  Place all employees in a position of “best fit” based on knowledge, skills, abilities and aptitude.

2. SCOPE

The Jamaica Constabulary Force Human Resource Division will continuously develop its human and intellectual capital by equipping employees with competencies that are based on its strategic goals as well as specific job requirements. All education, training and development interventions will be aligned to organizational needs and strategies; comply with relevant legislation and meet the highest possible quality standards.

The Organization shall act to retain its skilled employees by ensuring that all aspects of its Training Management policies and procedures meet best practice criteria and quality standards.

All employees, supervisors and managers/directors shall be informed and kept up to date in respect of current education, training and development plans, strategies and structures in order to facilitate their appropriate participation in learning interventions.

Human Resource Development Policy Document

3. UNDERLYING PRINCIPLES OF POLICY

The guiding principles of this policy are:

-  Equality of opportunity
-  Commitment to the development and training of all
-  Being a learning organization
-  Ensuring that staff Members have the requisite skills and abilities to deliver required services

4. HUMAN RESOUCSE DEVELOPMENT UNIT

This Unit deals with the development and training of staff to meet the requirements of the jobs, by facilitating and coordinating training programs and services that support the Jamaica constabulary Force's strategic plans. Training can be obtained via internal, external, customized and overseas sources.

The main purpose of training and development shall be to ensure that the Organization's human resources have the competencies necessary to meet performance and quality standards in their current jobs. However, training and development interventions shall also be planned so as to develop individual employees' career and personal potential in order to meet their growth needs as well as the future human resource needs of the Organization.

The Human Resource Development Unit will apply agreed processes to periodically identify its skills priorities and training needs

The Organization shall allocate financial resources towards training and development and shall decide the amount and type of resources on an annual basis. All training and development budgets shall be developed in consultation with the Senior Director – Human Resources Management and Development.

Human Resource Development Policy Document

All training and development budgets shall be developed in consultation with the Senior Director – Human Resources Management and Development Division, who shall ensure that the Training Team has had reasonable opportunity to provide input to the budget

5. GENERAL TRAINING AND DEVELOPMENT STRATEGY

This policy is a strategic framework designed to serve as a guide and shall be executed and administered to all civilians of the Jamaica Constabulary Force. Training and development plans and programmes for all job levels shall support the Jamaica Constabulary Force's strategies, action plans, human resources planning process, as well as any other present and future training and development needs.

All training and development initiatives shall be properly coordinated and the results reviewed to determine how training methods can be improved and how maximum benefit can be obtained from resources devoted to training and development. Inter alia, this includes a systematic and cost-effective training and development approach, consisting of externally developed and presented, as well as in-house training and development programmes.

In respect of all training and development activities, the following shall apply:-

-  a structured approach to determine training and development needs; cost-effective procurement and/or development of training courses or programmes based on needs and evaluated in terms of criteria laid down from time to time;
-  the evaluation of training in terms of trainee reaction, learning, practical application, and results achieved;
-  annual reporting on training interventions.
-  participants' feedback in the form of a report: This is to be submitted within two (2) weeks after the completion of the programme.
-  training and development shall commence with the initial appointment of new employees and continue as long as the employee is employed. Existing employees shall be drawn into the training process in accordance with priorities established by way of a structured analysis of training needs.

5.1 Frequency Rate of Training

The Frequency of Rate of Training will be highlighted at the end of each quarter to determine the frequency with which all employees are trained. Such as monthly, quarterly, Bi-annually, every year or not trained at all. This is to ensure that all staff benefit from as much training as possible, and that no staff will be left behind.

6. DETERMINING TRAINING BENEFITS

Annual Training Needs Analysis will be done to ascertain the current needs of the workforce. This will be aligned to Human Resource Planning as well as consultation with supervisors and HR Managers. A training plan will be agreed on annually and will be incorporated in the budget provision for the following year. Annual appraisals will also be scrutinized to identify gaps in performance which will indicate specific needs for training.

The Human Resource Development Unit (HRD) will also liaise with external Agencies/Institutions and Ministries and advise staff of training opportunities.

7. CRITERIA FOR GRANTING OF TRAINING

All nominations for training awards must:

- a. Have the sanction of the relevant Head of Department, in some cases such as overseas courses from the Permanent Secretary and or the Commissioner of Police
- b. Be made on the appropriate application form, as well as a Training Request Form
- c. Be submitted to the Human Resource Development Division (For overseas courses through the Senior Director).

Human Resource Development Policy Document

In addition, the request for training must be based on the training needs of the Division, as these relate to its mission, vision, strategic goals and objectives. The areas of training requested should be included in the Division's training proposals for the relevant financial year.

7.1 When is Training Recommended

All training activities will be based on clearly identified needs of the Organization and the employees. This will take account of the development and training needs identified as part of the Performance Management and Appraisal System, job role, and current competence of the employee.

7.2 Training Programmes

The Organisation's Training Programmes include those internal, external, and customised training which seek, in a very deliberate way to strengthen the skills of employees in order to meet specific goals of the organization.

7.3 Training Programme and Delivery

Training programmes will span both internal and external means and will be delivered using a range of delivery methods in order to ensure that the relevant and most effective training solutions are selected.

The HR Manager will ensure that all training providers are qualified and of a suitable caliber to conduct training. All courses must be provided by an accredited University/Institution.

Internal trainers used for in house training courses and on the job training should be given guidance and instruction to ensure that employees are given the best possible training. Where possible, employees who undertake training shall be given a training certificate and a copy of this placed on his or her personal file.

Where customized training is required for groups of staff, the HRD Unit will request specific training specification from its supplier and appropriate rates in keeping with budget allocations from the Budget Director, through the Senior Director.

Human Resource Development Policy Document

Decisions about customized training will be done through proposals from at least two entities. Government Entities will be given first priority provided they meet the required criteria.

8. GUIDING PRINCIPLES

Appendix 1

JAMIACA CONSTABULARY FORCE Competency Framework CIVILIANS

Overview

A Competency, in the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) is defined as “Observable and measureable knowledge, skills, abilities and attitudes required by employees to effectively execute their tasks to achieve the desired outcomes for the organization”.

The following competencies have been decided on for the civilian arm of the JCF and should be used to manage the performance of members. Each competency has been defined and broken down into five (5) levels. The competency levels are progressive; therefore, a member who is required to exhibit a competency level of 4 for instance, would be expected to have mastered the preceding levels.

Required levels of competencies to be demonstrated are based on position and will be outlined on job descriptions.

Supervisors are urged to discuss these with members under their command to ensure mutual understanding.
