8.0 Standard Operating Procedures

The Performance Management and Appraisal System is designed so that each member's individual Work Plans are aligned with their respective divisional/formation targets and objectives, allowing continuous evaluation of their actual performance.

8.1 Development of Job Description

A critical component of the performance appraisal process is the creation and updating of generic and specialist job descriptions for key positions within the Jamaica Constabulary Force also:

- 8.1.1 These job descriptions form the basis for evaluations and promote objectivity and target setting, which is in line with contemporary policing practices.
- 8.1.2 At the commencement of the Performance Appraisal Cycle, a job description should be reviewed, which will guide the development of the Individual Work Plans.
- 8.1.3 The respective Divisional Administrative Officers should receive the Job Descriptions and Work Plans by March 31st annually.
- 8.1.4 Job Descriptions, Work Plans, and Interim Appraisals are to be retained and made available to the appropriate authorities for review when required.

8.2 Developing Work Plan

8.2.1 The Work Plan should seek to align major tasks and work activities to meet the strategic goals of the organisation, state clearly the outputs expected from an individual employee, and promote quality work. The Work Plan should be:

- A. Developed in consultation between supervisors and employees with objectives to be achieved, agreed and prioritized during the appraisal period;
- B. Flexible (i.e., it can be adjusted as agreed to accommodate changes in priorities and resources);
- C. Written in clearly stated terms;
- D. When developing the Work Plan, an updated output-focused job description should be used as a reference document, detailing the job's main objectives and key outputs.

8.2.2 The Work Plan should inter alia consist of:

- A. Objectives - These should be specific to the period under consideration. They should be achievable with an element of challenge.
- B. Targets - Measurable tasks to achieve objectives. They can be used to quantify and qualify performance indicators.
- C. Performance Indicators - A qualitative or quantitative means of measuring an output or outcome (target), with the intention of gauging the performance of the Appraisee;
- D. Activities (Major Tasks) - The major tasks included in the Work Plan should be target-oriented, meaning they are tasks to be performed to achieve the divisional objectives.
- E. Expected outcomes - An expected outcome is a formal statement of what the Work Plan objectives and activities are expected to achieve over the appraising period.

8.3 Tracking Mechanisms for Measuring Outputs and Critical Competencies

As a part of the Work Planning process, it is critical that information sources be identified that can be used to effectively and efficiently track performance. The following should be kept in mind:

- 8.3.1 Information sources should be kept to a minimum, as this assists in simplifying the performance management process. During the performance planning meetings, these should be identified and agreed upon with the employee.
- 8.3.2 The information sources should provide both the employee and the supervisor with reliable performance feedback.

- 8.3.3 If performance-related data cannot be systematically collected, nor be defended in a possible appeals process, it should not be used. However, ensure that the critical performance is evaluated.
- 8.3.4 Remember that it is impossible to observe each employee's every behaviour. It is possible to collect performance-related facts from a variety of written as well as other sources.

8.4 Meeting Performance Expectations

An employee might not be able to meet the performance expectations. Before employers meet with their employees, it is necessary to determine the possible causes and identify possible solutions. Some of the more common reasons why an employee might not be able to meet performance expectations are:

1. Inadequate resources
2. Lack of motivation
3. Poor Attitude
4. Medical problems
5. Inadequate support /guidance from manager/supervisor.
6. Unclear expectations
7. Lack of skill or ability
8. A flawed selection process
9. Personal challenges

8.5 Dealing with Performance Challenges

From time to time, performance challenges emerge during the review period. When these arise, it is important that the root causes of the performance challenge be identified and appropriately addressed. A common error made by many managers and supervisors is that a performance challenge requires a formal training solution. It is therefore imperative that a thorough analysis be made to ensure the proper problem diagnosis, which will increase the likelihood of an effective solution being found. The benefit of regular appraisal and continuous feedback is that there will be a track record of performance preceding the final evaluation. If at the formal evaluation there remains a disagreement, then begin the Performance Management Appeals Process by doing the following:

1. First define the problem and basis for disagreement
2. Review existing records with the employee including interventions designed to improve performance in specific areas identified as problematic

8.6 Coaching

Coaching is one of the most effective ways in which a supervisor can improve employee performance. The process of coaching is most successful when employees are involved in the process of defining the problem or goal, and in developing the strategies, solutions and action plan to close the gap identified.

8.6.1 Opportunities for Coaching

Coaching is a powerful tool for addressing performance problems as well as further developing employees' strengths. You may use coaching in the following situations:

- a. To prepare an employee for additional responsibilities;
- b. To address a performance problem;
- c. To create a developmental plan;
- d. When an employee is not applying skills or knowledge learned in training;
- e. When an employee asks for assistance ;
- f. To help an employee face an upcoming challenge;
- g. Before delegating an assignment.

8.6.2 Benefits that are derived from coaching include:

- a. Reducing the need to supervise closely, as staff develop the ability to take responsibility for their own projects;
- b. Improving staff morale and confidence;

- c. Job enrichment; and
- d. Improving productivity.

8.6.3 Preparing for the Coaching Session

It is important that managers/supervisors make the necessary preparations before going into a coaching session. Possible steps to take are outlined below:

- A. Define the Problem, Challenge, or Opportunity: In cases where there is a performance problem, write a brief description of the expectations and the observed performance to determine the gap between desired and actual performance. When coaching for other purposes, determine the expected performance and the possible barriers to achieving it.
- B. Assess the Impact: The cost of allowing the problem to continue should be assessed. Factors such as time, other resources, employee morale, staffing and client satisfaction should be considered.

8.7 Conducting Interim Appraisals

8.7.1 The value of a Performance Management and Appraisal System is lost unless the results are communicated to employees, and should be communicated in a way that encourages employees to take positive steps to improve their effectiveness in the workplace. An Interim Appraisal should be conducted to:

- A. Assess progress against targets and performance in the critical areas of competence;
- B. Identify any significant obstacles that may require specific interventions; and
- C. Any assistance or adjustment of targets in line with resources and priorities.

8.7.2 Scheduled Interim Appraisals

- A. In the appraisal cycle, a half-year Interim Appraisal (September) should be conducted, and a copy should be retained for the Final Appraisal.
- B. Quarterly Interim Appraisals should be conducted for vulnerable groups, such as probationers, contracted workers, and those with strong concerns about their performance.
- C. Interim appraisals should only be conducted for a period not less than six months.
- D. Where a member returns to work off extended vacation leave, protracted sick leave, suspension, interdiction, etc., during the evaluation period, an Interim Appraisal should be done to track the member's performance for the remaining period of no less than six (6) months,

8.8 Final Appraisal:

- A. Final Appraisal Interview is to be conducted, and an appraisal report is to be completed for each member of staff in the JCF (sworn and unsworn); Final Appraisals should be completed and submitted on or before April 30th annually.
- B. Welfare, training, and development needs should be recommended, where required.
- C. The completed Appraisal Form, along with supportive documents, is to be submitted to the respective Reviewing Officer for review and signing.
- D. The Appraisee should be given the opportunity to review, comment (if he or she wishes) and sign. A copy of the completed Appraisal Form is to be given to the Appraisee.
- E. A Final Appraisal should not be conducted for a member who has been on interdiction, suspension, study leave, vacation leave, or any other leave exceeding six (6) months.

- F. Where an Appraiser who is being transferred and has served at least six (6) months in the division, an appraisal should be conducted, and a copy of the booklet sent to the new division.

NB: At the time of the final performance evaluation, an employee should not be rated below the minimum standard unless, at the time of the previous interim evaluation(s), the employee was formally notified of the need to improve performance, and an improvement plan was developed and implemented.

8.8.1 Performance Appraisal Abstract

An abstract report should be completed within ten (10) days of the final appraisal having been conducted, which should be submitted to the Human Resources Division, and a copy retained on the member's personal file in the division, and

8.8.2 Performance Appraisal Review Interview

An interview should be conducted for the completion of the final appraisal. This interview should be prepared and conducted in the following manner:

A. Preparing for the interview:

A collaborative approach should be taken in setting the agenda, venue and time for the performance review session. The following guidelines are recommended:

- i. venue should be a neutral place;
- ii. if possible, ensure that there are no obstacles e.g. desks, between the Appraiser and Appraisee to create an amicable atmosphere; and
- iii. ensure that you will not be interrupted during the appraisal session, i.e. hold all telephone calls and do not schedule any appointments close to the time of the session.

B. Supporting Documentation

It is important to have all the relevant documentation to support the performance appraisal or review; otherwise, the credibility of the assessment will be questionable. The following documentation should be brought to the performance review:

- i. The initial Work Plan was agreed;
- ii. Changes agreed to the Work Plan and the revised Work Plan (if one was redone);
- iii. Notes from the interim evaluation(s); and
- iv. Log notes related to critical incidents that had an impact on planned work activities.

C. Giving and Receiving Feedback

Giving and receiving feedback should be a routine part of the performance management process. However, feedback should be based on observed and/or verifiable work-related behaviours, actions, results, and statements. Effective feedback is beneficial to employees as it helps to sustain good performance, develop new skills, and improve performance where necessary.

D. Building Motivation during the Performance Appraisal Review Interview

The ideal performance appraisal results in a desire for continued improvement or sustained good performance by the employee. If an employee leaves the evaluation motivated to improve rather than feeling demoralized, the supervisor can consider the appraisal to be a success.

E. Techniques for Interview:

The following list summarizes techniques a supervisor can use to conduct an effective, motivation-building performance interview:

- i. Point out the employee's achievements and strengths.
- ii. Note progress made toward last year's goals.
- iii. Discuss a limited number of key issues; do not overload the employee.
- iv. Do not spring surprises on the employee; the interview should be a recap of the feedback provided all year.
- v. Ask questions and listen to the employee's answers.
- vi. Restate employee remarks.
- vii. Identify and discuss differences that the employee has about the process.
- viii. Try to understand the employee's view.
- ix. Discuss job performance, not personality.
- x. Describe behaviour and do not interpret motives.
- xi. Avoid discussing personal problems.
- xii. Keep an open mind.
- xiii. Translate negatives into areas for improvement.

NB: The relevant Rating Guide should be used to guide the process of the final appraisal.

8.9 Poor Performance

8.9.1 Employee's performance should be monitored against the agreed targets throughout the Appraisal Cycle.

8.9.2 The necessary assistance, support, and guidance are to be provided to facilitate the Appraisee's optimum performance while ensuring that Work Plans remain relevant to organisational priorities and resources.

8.9.3 A poor performance is considered when an Appraisee's overall score is below seventy-five (75%) per cent.

8.10 Performance Management Appeals Process

8.10.1 If at the Performance Appraisal Review Interview, there remains a disagreement, then the Performance Management Appeal Process should begin by doing the following:

- i. First, define the problem and basis for disagreement.
- ii. Review existing records with the employee, including interventions designed to improve performance in specific problematic areas.

8.10.2 This appeal offers a transparent process through which any member who believes they were unfairly treated during their evaluation, may, raise a dispute in accordance with the Grievance Management Policy.

8.10.3 Steps to be taken where there is an unresolved issue:

- a. the Appraiser and Appraisee should attempt to resolve the issue if possible;
- b. the Reviewing Officer is required to intervene, if required;
- c. if the problem persists, intervention by the Senior Human Resource Manager should be sought; and
- d. if there is still no resolution, a panel will be identified by the Senior Director of the Human Resource Division and appointed to adjudicate the appeal. The Panel's recommendation will be presented to the Commissioner of Police.

NB: Legal action may be pursued if a point of law is in question. See PMAS Process Flow (Appendix 1).

8.11 Sanctions

8.11.1 An increment will not be paid to an Appraisee who performs below the agreed level to qualify for an increment (75%).

8.11.2 Other relevant sanctions may be applied as necessary in keeping with the regulations and guidelines governing Human Resource Management in the JCF.

8.12 Payment of Increment and Non-Financial Rewards

8.12.1 Increment is payable when the Appraisee has achieved an overall score of seventy-five (75%) and above, based on targets and competencies agreed upon;

8.12.2 The Appraisee may be eligible for other rewards when this level of performance has been exceeded (i.e., when achieving an overall score of 80% or more).
